Meet Federal Realty, your friendly neighborhood mega-developer Briggs talks development at Assembly Square

FRIT's Senior VP of development Don Briggs is bullish on Assembly Row growth.

By Andrew Firestone

The question is still on everyone's mind here in Somerville: when is the smart-growth multi-use wonderland Assembly Row by the Mystic coming?

Sooner than we think, possibly.

Developer Federal Realty Investment Trust (FRIT) says they will break ground on their first block of the $1.5 billion development in Q1 of 2012, bringing to fruition the public-private partnership for the development of vacant Assembly Row. In May, Somerville Alderman approved a $25.75 million bond as requested by the state in exchange for funding for the Orange Line, sealing a Tri-Party agreement between FRIT, the city and the commonwealth.

This cemented funding plans for the orange line, which included FRIT contributing $15 million to the $50 million transit project. The municipal bonds were used to pay for roads and a storm water drain needed for the construction, and allow the city to reinvest tax revenues back into the development. The Continued on page 17

Giving the gifts that give back Holiday gift ideas from Somerville non-profits

By Elizabeth Sheeran

If it is better to give than to receive, it must be even better to give a gift that gives twice: once to the lucky recipient and once to a good cause. This holiday season, Somerville is full of ways to put a little working capital into the hands of local non-profits, while putting a smile on the face of someone you know.

Give someone the gift of the Somerville holiday spirit they can hold onto all year long, with a copy of Somerville City of Lights, a book tribute by The Somerville Arts Council to the dazzling displays that light up city neighborhoods throughout the holidays.

"These homes are showcases of Somerville pride. People want to share that special local experience with friends and family," said Heather Balchunas of the Somerville Arts Council, which uses the sale proceeds to fund arts programs for kids of all ages.

It looks like long time Alderman Tom Taylor from Ward 3 will be serving as Board of Alderman President for 2012. Tom was voted unanimously, and he came in to the caucus in a wheelchair, seemingly pleased to be elected. We congratulate Tom for his recent victory and his being elected President again. He's a good person and Alderman. His recent bout with cancer, we have been informed, is in remission and he feels confident that he can still do a good job for the residents here in the 'Ville.

So, yeah. Hard work pays off. Part of hard work is matching supply with demand. Your work can only pay off so long as there is demand for it. Patrick signs act to protect transgender people Somerville lawmaker penned civil rights bill

By Andrew Firestone

Rep. Carl Sciortino, D -Somerville, saw one of his sponsored laws enacted by the Massachusetts House of Representatives and signed into law by Gov. Deval Patrick last week. The bill protects the 33,000 transgender people in the commonwealth from discrimination by granting them status as a protected class under the State's hate crime laws.

"I know that this is a good bill that restores civil rights for people who really need them," said Sciortino.

The bill was co-sponsored by Byron Rushing in the house, and Sen. Sonia Chiang-Diaz and Ben Downing in the Senate.

The house passed the bill at the end of the session by of vote of 95-58 on November 15, where it faced criticism from house republicans, including Rep. Shaunna O'Connell and Rep. Marc Lombardo of Billerica. Lombardo used the example of a daycare company, who might lose business because of parents who would not accept the employee.

O'Connell said that state laws were strong enough to protect people against such hate, but was countered by Sciortino, who said society was not doing its job in stopping blatant discrimination.

"Transgender people can't stay closeted..."

Sciortino was joined by Rep. Denise Provost who pointed out that Bright Horizons, one of the biggest daycare companies in the state had laws protecting against such discrimination. They were supported by Somerville Board of Alderman President Rebekah Gewirtz, in her capacity as lobbyist for the National Association of Social Workers.

"For a lot of people, the transgender equal rights bill is a jobs bill. There are a lot of people who are transgender who have trouble getting employed who will now be protected," she said. "They excel at their work and they do well. People should be able to maintain their employment."

The bill protects transgender people from discrimination in receiving employment, housing and credit. Sciortino was quick to point out that transgender people, upon receiving employment, must reveal their gender of birth, and sometimes find themselves alienated at the revelation.

"Transgender people can't stay closeted, they have to disclose at that moment," he said. "It's the reality that employers on a regular basis revoke offers of employment at that moment."

During his speech on the floor of the house chamber, Sciotino noted the violence and hatred with which many transgender people are met with on a daily basis. He recalled the tragic murder of Rita Hester, who was stabbed to death in 1998 in Allston. He recounted several similar cases of hate-driven crimes.

"Each of these people are human beings, residents of this state, with real lives, families, struggles and successes, who experienced in the worst way how unforgiving society can be towards transgender people simply because of who they are," he said.

"Having a high likelihood of being unemployed or underemployed, many transgender individuals live in poverty and depend on safety programs to get by," he said, noting the cost of discrimination upon the transgender community.

The bill was lauded by Attorney General Martha Coakley, House Speaker Robert DeLeo and Govenor Deval Patrick, who signed the bill into law on November 23.

"No individual should face discrimination because of who they are," said Governor Patrick in a press release. "This legislation gives Massachusetts the necessary tools to stop hate crimes against transgender people and to treat others fairly. I am proud to sign it."

Massachusetts joins 15 other states who have enacted similar legislation to combat hatred against transgender people.

Rep. Carl Sciortino, feels that the new law is a necessary measure in assuring equal treatment for those in the transgender community.

Possible link between Davis Square bank robberies

By Andrew Firestone

Somerville police are look for the perpetrator of two bank robberies in Davis Square that occurred in the last week. While not officially labeled as such, Deputy Paul Upton did acknowledge that both robberies were "similar."

On Tuesday, November 29, a lone man walked into the Winter Hill bank on 5 Cutter Ave., passed a note, and made off with an undisclosed amount of money at approximately 2:45 p.m. No one was hurt.

On Black Friday, November 25, a "similar" incident occurred at the Citizens Bank around the corner in Davis Square. The suspect passed a note, grabbed the money, and fled at around 12:30 p.m.. No one was hurt in the robberies.

Unruly, unwanted guest removed

Somerville police received a call last Sunday from a Franklin Street resident complaining of an unwanted guest who was reportedly drunk and behaving aggressively, police said.

Police officers arrived at the residence and were met by the complaining party, who immediately pointed at her couch and indicated that the woman in question was there, completely covered by a blanket, according to reports.

"I Just want her out of here," the alleged victim reportedly told the police, "she keeps yelling and being very rude. She is going to wake my daughter."

When asked who the individual was police report they were told "she is a friend but she is no longer welcome in my apartment."

According to police, the unwelcome guest, later identified as Lisa Jarvis, 45, of Cambridge, continued yelling as they attempted to calm her down for questioning.

Jarvis was repeatedly advised that she was not welcome in the alleged victim's home and that she would have to leave, but she reportedly continued the yelling, police said.

She eventually began putting on her shoes, according to reports, as she made a call to someone on her cell phone, but the yelling continued.

Police officers reportedly advised Jarvis that it was two in the morning, that she was causing a disturbance, and that she would have to leave.

After repeatedly ignoring police officers' requests to calm down and leave, police report that she was placed under arrest and charged with disorderly conduct.

Missing person sought

Muhammad Ilyas, a 53 year-old non-English speaking male, has been missing since Friday, November 25. He has medical and psychological issues, according to his family. He is known to frequent the Union Square and Twin City Mall areas. If you have any information as to his whereabouts please contact the Somerville Police 617 625-1212.

Somerville cop gets Supreme Court treatment 'Superman' rule declined

By Andrew Firestone

The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court issued a ruling in favor of an offduty Somerville police officer on November 18, ruling that a police officer does not have to change into civilian clothes when off duty.

The ruling came after an incident in 2006 when Robert Kelleher of the SPD took the keys from a suspected drunk driver, Joseph Limone, while in Woburn and off-duty, but still in uniform. Kelleher had been rear-ended by the DUI operator and smelled alcohol on the man's breath while exchanging papers.

Limone, who now has seven DUI convictions, won his case in Massachusetts Appeals Court in 2010, but the decision has now been overturned by the higher court.

The MAC and SJC were at odds in the issue as to whether or not Limone had been legally arrested by Kelleher, who took his keys and ordered him to stay in his car until a Woburn officer arrived, saw him fail a sobriety test, and arrested him.

The SJC decided that Kelleher had acted merely as a concerned citizen ensuring safety for the public and was within his right, police officer or no.

"We decline... to create a 'Superman' rule of law that would require out-of-jurisdiction, off-duty police officers to change into civilian clothing before interacting with private citizens following traffic accidents," Justice Francis X. Spina wrote for the unanimous court.

Early morning Somerville Police arrest

Two Somerville Police Officers arrested and detained a female suspect with alleged possible outstanding warrants on Washington Street early Monday morning. A female police officer driving a police transport van drove the suspect to the police station for booking and her vehicle was towed.

cards at select local retailers, listed on the Arts Council website at somervilleartscouncil.org. While you are there you can buy your tickets or maps for this year's Illumination Tours of the highlights of the holiday displays, scheduled for December 17.

For those a little less ambitious with their seasonal home décor, the Community Growing Center will sell hand-decorated holiday wreaths at the Union Square Winter Craft Market on Saturday, December 3, with a discount for orders made by Thursday, December 1. Proceeds will benefit the programs of this volunteer-run community garden, including outdoor classroom activities for Somerville schoolchildren.

Speaking of things grown locally, you can share the sweet taste of Somerville, quite literally, with a bottle of maple syrup, tapped from trees on Tufts Campus and boiled down at the Growing Center by Groundwork Somerville. Proceeds benefit Groundwork's green education programs, and bottles are on sale for $6 at Sherman Market in Union Square, or at the Union Square Farmers Market.

While you are in Union Square, stop by Creative Union, a unique gallery filled to capacity with gift options, all produced by developmentally disabled adults, who get a majority of the proceeds from the sale of anything they create, including jewelry, crocheted accessories, on-site screen printing, and a full range of art.

Program coordinator Anyahlee Suderman said each and every sale can make a huge impact in the life of an individual. "It's not just about the money, it's about being respected," said Suderman.

Creative Union offers the added bonus of real world experience for the program participants who work there.

"Working here at Creative Union is a great way to get yourself into training on the cash register and things like that, and just seeing all the art on the walls. What's good is all the art is by people with disabilities," said Bryce Miller, a 29-year-old Somerville resident with Down syndrome, who often manages the store on his own.

Tap further into Somerville's artistic community to inspire someone on your gift list to create their own works of art. Go to mudflat.org for pottery lessons at Mudflat Studio, or look for classes at brickbottomartists.org. Artisan's Asylum, a community craft studio on-line at artisansasylum.com, offers workshop memberships and an eclectic mix of classes, including welding, coffee making, woodworking, candle casting and fire breathing. Class tuition supports the local artists cultural programming. The Center sells gift cards that can be used for any of its classes or events, or in the Armory Café, an eatery and performance space in the converted armory building on Highland Avenue.

Tickets to any of Somerville's nonprofit performing arts venues make great gifts. Theatre@First at Davis Square offers $50 subscriptions for its entire season. (Next up: Pride and Prej- udice). President Rebecca Hunter said the all-volunteer group strives to present professional-quality theater at affordable prices, on a shoestring budget that has to pay for everything from royalties to rent. RESPOND Inc. snags Chamber award

By Cathleen Twardzik

RESPOND Inc., a Somervillebased domestic violence agency, recently received the Powderhouse Award for Non-profit of the Year from the Somerville Chamber of Commerce at the Holiday Inn in Somerville. The award was presented at the 65th Annual Chamber of Commerce Dinner.

"Darcie DeLuca, Controller of RESPOND Inc. and Kathleen Donahue, President of the Board of Directors of RE-SPOND Inc., accepted the Powderhouse Award on RESPOND's behalf," said Jessica Brayden, Executive Director of RESPOND Inc.

"RESPOND deserves this award as a community partner who works tirelessly every day to meet the needs of people in our community," said Mark Alston-Follansbee, Director of the Somerville Homeless Coalition.

The Powderhouse Awards, which have been presented by the Somerville Chamber of Commerce since 1996, are given to a distinguished local nonprofit on a yearly basis.

Further, the awards are generated by nominations of Chamber members. A committee reviews the nominations and then the full board votes for an awardee.

Flatbread - 45 Day St., Somerville 617-776-0552 RESPOND Inc. is the first domestic violence agency in Massachusetts, as well as the second oldest in the nation. Each year RESPOND helps thousands of men, women and children via outreach, emergency shelter and counseling, as well as through other services.

"For 37 years RESPOND has served Somerville and its surrounding communities through our mission to end domestic violence. We have always had the strong support of the Somerville community, both businesses and individuals, and we look forward to continuing our mission in years to come," said Brayden.

The non-profit reaches over 7,000 survivors of domestic violence annually.

"I don't know what some women [would] have done, if they didn't have a vehicle such as RESPOND. You're helping stop the abuse for future generations," said Sandra Mc-Goldrick, Winter Hill Bank President and CEO.

The organization serves communities throughout Greater Boston and beyond with special emphasis on Somerville, Everett, Malden, Medford, Melrose, North Reading, Reading, Cambridge, Stoneham, Wakefield, Winchester and Woburn.

Programs and services include an emergency shelter, individual and group counseling, legal advocacy, community outreach and educational programs.

"The most exciting part of working at RESPOND is being part of a team that changes lives. Often, people will tell me they called the RESPOND crisis hotline one, five, or even 10 years ago, and that call saved their life. It's amazing to hear not only about the great work the RESPOND is doing now, but that the work of our predecessors and founders is still having an impact on the lives of so many [people] in the community," said Brayden.

RESPOND will have a free open house in April. The event will provide an occasion to discover all of its life-saving services.

At present, services are provided in Spanish, English, French, Cape Verdean Creole and Portuguese.

Whatever our personal circumstances, we know that prosperity of spirit is far more important than the material wealth that may elude us from time to time.

As always, "local first" applies to our friends, families, and the occasional stranger as much as it does to our local economy. It's a time to be a little kinder, and a little gentler with one another.

We are certain that the rewards to be gained from this will soften the effects of whatever excesses we may experience along the way.

Since our own former Mayor and present Registrar of Deeds Gene Brune announced last week that he was officially not running for re-election next year, a lot of speculation as to who might run is going on. We hear that two local women might be jumping into the race. First of all, popular Ward 2 Alderman Maryann Houston, who presently works at Cambridge Health Alliance, is considering a run. Then there is Attorney Maria Curtatone, the sister of our Mayor, who is seriously looking at the seat. Maria is a popular lady in her own right. She was also recently voted "Best of Somerville 'Somerville Attorney" by the readers of The News. We'll be watching what happens here, but there are rumblings of maybe a few others as well.

one thing about the three present incumbents. They always vote the same way no matter what. It's almost like they get together and are either told how to vote or agree on how they should vote the same way. That is speculation on our part, but we see that about 98% or so of their votes are alike. Maybe some independent voices might come out and run against one or all of them?

Someone was in the Winter Hill Post Office recently and left behind on the counter some pictures of a young Marine in uniform. The ladies behind the counter saved them from being thrown out and have displayed them on their counter to see if anyone recognizes them. They have been looking for the owner of the pictures now for a couple of weeks. We can't say enough about these lady Post Office employees. They are very nice and always smiling, plus

Does Somerville need another charter school?

By Joseph A. Curtatone

I think it's fair to say that, as a group, Somerville's elected officials were taken by surprise last August when a formal proposal surfaced to create a new "progressive" K-8 charter school here in Somerville. Now, with a public hearing on this proposal scheduled for December 14th (4-6 p.m. at the Somerville High School Auditorium), it's time for every Somerville official, school parent, and taxpayer to focus on the details - and to speak out.

The proposed school would, according to its application "be a democratic, K-8 public school that will inspire and enable children from diverse backgrounds to develop their full intellectual, social-emotional, and creative potential through in-depth, meaningful learning experiences that draw on their intrinsic curiosity and reflect their individual needs, interests, and learning strengths. The school will offer a broad range of educational programming - including a special focus on science and languages - to serve an economically and culturally diverse community." Both as Mayor and as a Somerville Public Schools parent, my personal reaction to this proposal is that the school it describes sounds a lot like the schools - and the community that we already have. Why is a new charter school needed?

I also recognize that this proposal calls for the development of a school that would ultimately serve 425 students and that, under the current funding formula, such a school would cost the Somerville Public Schools nearly $5 million a year in funding - but without anything like a similar reduction in operating costs. That's ten percent of our annual schools budget.

Now, I'm certainly not opposed to the concept of charter schools: across the state, we've seen them bring fresh ideas and energy to under-performing school systems. Here in Somerville, our city administration and the Somerville Public Schools have worked with the Prospect Hill Academy to support the role of an alternative educational experience paid for with public education dollars.

But, frankly, I don't see the point of this latest proposal. It's true that the Somerville Public Schools need to improve their MCAS performance: our city works hard every day to deal with the challenges of a low commercial property tax base and a high percentage of low-income families and English Language Learners (ELL) in our schools. Yet despite these challenges, we have been making progress throughout our K-12 curriculum in bringing new programs and resources to our students, both during the school day and in after-school enrichment programs.

And while there's still plenty of room for improvement, we have made and are making progress by working together as a community to put our resources where they'll do the most good.

That's why I'm very concerned about the impact of a new charter school on our student population as a whole. Our School Committee and Schools Superintendent Tony Pierantozzi have analyzed that impact, and their findings are disturbing: In addition to requiring the closing of one of our current schools, the budget hole created by a new charter school would result in reduced funding for arts, music, gym and libraries throughout the system - and, ironically, would also force cutbacks both in the multilingual SMILE early education program at the Capuano School, and in the Unidos bilingual K-8 initiative.

In fact, the way the state mandates spending for charter schools means that this proposal could hurt the entire city, not just the schools. If we want to preserve our educational investments, we'll have to make cuts elsewhere - and $5 million a year is serious money. I think the burden of proof is on the proponents; they need to show our residents why tax dollars should be shifted to a new and exclusive charter school.

And so far, I haven't heard from any of the proponents. It's almost as if they didn't want a vigorous and open discussion on the merits of their proposal.

That's not the way we work in this city. At its best, Somerville has always come together to solve problems as a community. If parents believe we should improve the ways we provide English Language Learning, language instruction and science education, then let's work together to improve those programs for all of our students and all of our schools. Let's not create an entirely new charter school that, at best, only serves a small subset of the Somerville student population while diverting significant resources from the Schools budget. Every parent wants the best possible education for her or his children, but we also all benefit when we know that our public schools are providing the same high-quality education to our neighbors' children, too. I'm confident that my kids are getting a great education in Somerville's Public Schools - and one of the big reasons for my confidence is that the system's resources are fairly apportioned to provide the best possible program for every kid in every school.

But I'm not the one who gets to decide whether to divert city school money to create a new charter school: that will be made by the Commonwealth's Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE). They'll be the ones making holding the hearing on the 14th.

No matter which side you take in this discussion, I urge you to join me in attending the hearing and in making your views known to the folks at DESE. In the meantime, you can find out more about this proposal by visiting the websites sponsored by supporters of a new charter school (http://www.thespcs.org) and a parent group called Progress Together for Somerville that has formed in opposition (https://sites.google.com/site/P rogressTogetherforSomerville).

Please mark your calendar, come to the hearing and make your voice heard.

On The Silly Side by Jimmy Del Ponte The Bargain Center

Thanksgiving...gone. Black Friday...gone. A month of hectic, frantic and desperate preparation for Christmas has begun. The commercials may tell us that prices are low, but shoppers are high-strung. You saw the news reports that showed crazed bargain hunters throughout the country acting like they were giving away wads of cash. They stood in line overnight rubbing elbows with the same people they would be willing to fight to the finish, just to save $100 on a flat screen TV, or an X-Box. You would have to pay me at least $300 just to stand outside in the dark freezing my butt off. Back in my day you'd go into the Bargain Center in Davis Square with twenty bucks and come out with gifts for everyone. So what if the box was ripped, the item had slight water damage or it was singed and smelled like smoke? That's why they called it the Bargain Center. Actually we old 'Villens called it simply "Bargies." One stop Christmas shopping!

A friend tells me, "I got my first Barbie Center, or Woolworths, or Park Snow. He had birthday presents for his son Richard. Richard's birthday was Patriots Day, so it had to be in mid-April and I was likely down their house because it was school vacation week. I was probably 9 or 10 years old at the time. Richard was killed in Beirut in October 1983 when the Marine's barracks were bombed. Joe passed away right after Christmas in 1994. But I can remember that particular scene of seeing him walking back up the tracks from way down near the square. With bags of gifts, in the sunshine. The memory always evokes a parent's (or grandparent's) love for their children. Finally, one of the very reasons the Bargain Center existed proved to be its ultimate demise. A devastating fire so serious there would be no fire sale. "I remember the day it [The Bargain Center] burned down. I saw the smoke pall, likely all those pairs of discount sneakers, wafting through the air from my classroom at the Southern. Bright blue, sunny and cold day. It must've been late '71 or very early '72." Dan tells us, "We may have ventured into the burned out [Bargain Center] building too (what's the statute if limitations?). The whole neighborhood smelled of smoke." As I have mentioned in previous articles, I still have the green, rubber boots that my dad bought in the late 60's from "Bargies."

there. She was dressed like Jackie Kennedy and it was a fire stock sale. I still have it. Her legs were scarred from the fire and I loved her just the same. She did smell of smoke for the longest time though."

"My mother worked at the Bargain Center for a short time. I remember we bought Topo Gigio dolls there." Remember Topo Gigio, that little mouse on the Ed Sullivan Show?

"Bargies" seemed to be the place to buy curtains. You would buy them, take them home and hang them up. The burnt odor in the curtains gave your house that outdoor, campfire smell.

Here is a touching story. I remember seeing my dear cousin Joe Gordon walking back from the square with shopping bags from either the Bargain

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. This week, Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on four roll calls from prior legislative sessions during the week of November 14-18. There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week. precinct 1, ward 2, precinct 1, in the county of Middlesex; Boston, ward 2, ward 21, precincts 4, 6 and 7, ward 22, precincts 1, 2 and 5, Chelsea and Revere, ward 6, in the county of Suffolk; and Saugus, precincts 2, 6 and 10, in the county of Essex.

Our Legislators in the House and Senate for Somerville:

DISTRICT REPRESENTED: Twenty-seventh Middlesex. - Consisting of precinct 3 of ward 2, all precincts of ward 3, precinct 3 of ward 4, and all precincts of wards 5 and 6, of the city of Somerville, in the county of Middlesex.

Rep. Carl Sciortino

DISTRICT REPRESENTED: Thirty-fourth Middlesex. - Consisting of all precincts in wards 4 and 5, precinct 1 of ward 7, and precinct 2 of ward 8, of the city of Medford, precincts 1 and 2 of ward 4, and all precincts of ward 7, of the city of Somerville, both in the county of Middlesex.

Rep. Timothy Toomey

Sen. Patricia Jehlen

DISTRICT REPRESENTED: SECOND MID-DLESEX. - Medford, Somerville, ward 1, precincts 2 and 3, ward 2, precincts 2 and 3, and wards 3 to 7, inclusive, Woburn, ward 2, and Winchester.

INCREASE ALCOHOL LICENSES (S 2033)

House 149-5, approved and Gov. Deval Patrick signed into law a bill that would allow supermarkets and other large retailers to hold more alcoholic beverage licenses. The proposal increases the current cap of three, first established in 1933, to five in 2012, seven in 2016 and nine in 2020. The measure also would require stores to pay a $5,000 fee for every license they receive above three.

Supporters said the bill is a reasonable compromise between opposing sides of a possible 2012 ballot question that would allow local cities and towns to permit grocery stores to sell beer and wine. The ballot question is being pushed by the grocery store lobby and opposed by the liquor store lobby. Supporters noted the compromise will allow supermarkets to have more licenses while still protecting the 20,000 Massachusetts jobs in the package store industry.

Opponents offered no arguments.

In 2006, voters rejected by a 53-41 margin a similar ballot question that would allow local cities and towns to permit grocery stores to sell beer and wine. Proponents had argued that 34 other states allow this and argued it would end a monopoly and save consumers millions of dollars by fostering more competition. Opponents countered the measure would increase underage teens' access to liquor and lead to a hike in drinking-related problems and drunken driving accidents and deaths. (A "Yes" vote suring MassHealth is run properly and cost effectively.

In his veto message, Gov. Patrick said, "I am vetoing this section because it expends scarce program funds from the Health Safety Net Trust Fund. I do not object to an audit of MassHealth by the Inspector General using other available funds." (A "Yes" vote is for the study and the use of funds from the Health Safety Net Trust Fund.)

Rep. Denise Provost	Yes
Rep. Carl Sciortino	Yes
Rep. Timothy Toomey	Yes

CONTINUE SESSION BEYOND 9 P.M.

House 124-29, suspended its rules to allow the House session to continue beyond 9 p.m. and go until midnight.

Supporters said the House should remain in session to continue to act on important legislation before the winter recess.

Opponents said it is irresponsible to meet after 9 p.m. when legislators are tired and taxpayers are asleep.

In the end, the House adjourned at 9:24 p.m. (A "Yes" vote is for continuing the session beyond 9 p.m. A "No" vote is against continuing the session beyond 9 p.m.)

Rep. Denise Provost	Yes
Rep. Carl Sciortino	Yes

COLLECTIVE BARGAINING (H 3789)

House 151-2, approved an amendment allowing "evergreen clauses" to be included in collective bargaining contracts prospectively and retroactively back to October 2010. Evergreen clauses allow public employees to continue working under the terms of expired contracts while new deals are being negotiated.

This practice had long been followed in the Bay State until October 2010 when the Supreme Judicial Court ruled that evergreen clauses in union contracts are invalid because they violate laws that limit collective bargaining agreements to a maximum of three years.

Supporters said this pro-worker legislation would simply put into state law what has been in practice and has worked well for both management and unions for many years. They argued it will ensure essential continuity during often tense times when contracts are being negotiated.

AUDIT MASSHEALTH (H 3535)

House 155-0, overrode Gov. Patrick's veto of a budget section requiring the state's inspector general (IG), using funds from the Health Safety Net Trust Fund, to conduct a study and review of MassHealth, the state's Medicaid program that provides health care for low-income and disabled persons. The fund was established to cover necessary medical services for individuals who are uninsured or underinsured. The IG would issue a final report to the Legislature by March 1, 2012.

Override supporters said it is time to do a comprehensive study of MassHealth, which costs taxpayers billions of dollars. They argued the study will be helpful in enOpponents offered no arguments.

The Senate approved the measure on a voice vote, without a roll call, and sent it to the governor. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against it.)

Rep. Carl Sciortino	Yes

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

CASINOS (H 3087) - Gov. Patrick signed into law the bill that would allow three casinos and one slot parlor in the Bay State. The governor's signature ended decades of debate over whether to legalize casino gambling in Massachusetts.

Supporters hope the measure will create up to 15,000 new jobs, $270 million in one-time licensing fees and up to $500 million in annual tax revenue.

Opponents say casinos will prey on the poor and lead to crime, gambling addictions, domestic violence and even suicide.

BAN TRANSGENDER DISCRIMINATION (H

3810) - Gov. Patrick signed into law the bill that would add the words "gender identity" to the state's non-discrimination laws.

Supporters say this long-overdue law would prohibit discrimination in employment, education, housing and credit against transgender persons.

Some opponents say the bill would lead to an avalanche of lawsuits against small businesses. Others argue the state already has anti-discrimination laws that protect everyone, including transgender people.

STOP SEX TRADE (H 3808) - Gov. Patrick signed into law the measure that creates the crime of trafficking persons for sexual services, and imposes imprisonment for up to 20 years for violations. If the victim is a child under 18, the prison sentence increases to up to life in prison. A "Safe Harbor" provision helps underage victims by allowing courts to judge offenders under 18 apprehended for prostitution to be in need of social services rather than simply delinquent.

Supporters say Massachusetts will become the 48th state to crack down on this practice.

CONGRESSIONAL REDISTRICTING (H 3798)

- The governor signed into law a bill that redistricts the state's congressional districts and merges the existing 10 districts into nine for the 2012 elections. The state lost a seat because of new 2010 U.S. census figures that show Massachusetts' population growth is well below the national average.

BAN BASING AUTO INSURANCE ON CREDIT

RATING (H 3795) - Gov. Patrick signed into law a bill that would prohibit insurance companies from basing a customer's insurance rates on his or her credit rating.

Supporters say it is unfair and illogical to base premiums on something that has nothing to do with driving ability or risk. Some note while there are currently regulations prohibiting the use of credit scores, those regulations can easily be repealed by an agency while a state law would have to be repealed by the Legislature.

SINGLE LICENSE PLATES (H 3068) - The House rejected legislation that would require passenger cars to have only one license plate that would be mounted on the rear of the vehicle. Current law requires a plate on the front and rear.

Supporters said the bill would save millions of dollars by reducing by 50 percent the cost of manufacturing the plates. They note that 19 states currently require only one plate and argue studies show law enforcement has not decreased in those states.

Opponents said the use of front and back plates is helpful to the police in identifying vehicles and enforcing traffic and other laws. They noted that 31 states require the use of two plates.

RESIDENCY REQUIREMENTS (S 1325) - The House and Senate gave final approval to a proposal that would exempt assistant treasurers and assistant tax collectors from the requirement they live in the city or town in which they work. Current law exempts treasurers and collectors but not their assistants.

QUOTABLE QUOTES

"This legislation alone is not going to be the solution to our ongoing economic recovery, but it will help put unemployed residents back to work in good jobs with good benefits." - Senate President Therese Murray on the new law allowing three destination resort casinos and one slots parlor.

"This (casino) bill is a turkey. The economic, social and political consequences will create long lasting indigestion problems." - Tom Larkin, President of United to Stop Slots.

"Mr. Rossi's reactor, if successfully proven and developed, has the potential to change the way the world deals with energy." - Senate Republican Tarr on the visit to Massachusett. drea Rossi, creator of the E-Cat duce large amounts of energy fr nickel and hydrogen.

time." - House Speaker Bob DeLeo on his plans to remain Speaker of the House through 2016. He was first elected in 2009 and is subject to an eight-year term limit.

"That's baloney, and the people making that charge know it's baloney." - Gov. Patrick on charges that President Obama is responsible for the failure of Congress' Super Committee to craft a deal to reduce the federal deficit by at least $1.2 trillion over 10 years.

HOW LONG WAS LAST WEEK'S SESSION?

Beacon Hill Roll Call tracks the length of time the House and Senate were in session each week. Many legislators say legislative sessions are only one aspect of the Legislature's job and that a lot of important work is done outside of the House and Senate chambers. They note that their jobs also involve committee work, research, constituent work and other matters that are important to their districts. Critics say the Legislature does not meet regularly or long enough to debate and vote in public view on the thousands of pieces of legislation that have been filed. They note that the infrequency and brief length of sessions are misguided and lead to irresponsible late night sessions and a mad rush to act on dozens of bills in the days immediately preceding the end of an annual session.

During the week of November 21-25, the House met for a total of 20 minutes while the Senate met for a total of 34 minutes.

SOMERVILLE SPORTS St. Clement feast on Falcons for Thanksgiving

For the fourth straight year the St. Clement Anchormen feasted on the Trinity Catholic Falcons of Network during the annual Thanksgiving Day Catholic Central matchup.

Senior Co-captain Michael Julce (Malden) helped cap off a winning season for the Anchormen by leading all rushers with 144 yards and three TDs on ten carries.

Both teams came up empty on their first drives of the game. Julce opened the game up in the first quarter by grabbing a pass from junior QB Jamey Thompson (Somerville). Andrew Carvahlo (Somerville) kicked the extra point and the Anchormen were up by 7 early.

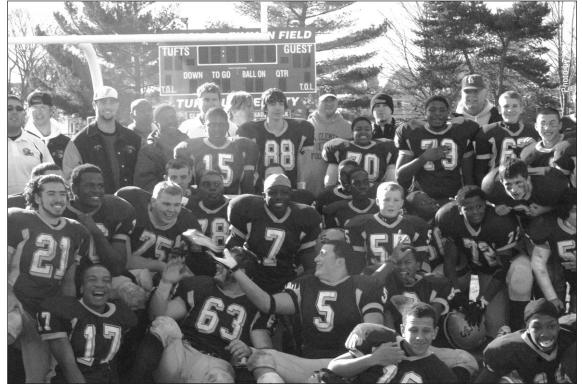

On the next drive, senior co-Pereira Mathew captain (Somerville) pounded the ball into the end zone on five consecutive carries to up the lead to 13-0. Junior Oyaronbi (Malden) intercepted a Falcon pass on the next drive to setup a nine-yard run by Julce. Carvahlo added another extra point to make the score 20-0.

"We really relied on our seniors to get us off to a great start, and they did," said Head Coach Colin Walsh. In the second half, Julce put on a show for the crowd with a 45yard touchdown run by eluding three Falcon defenders and breaking a tackle to put the game out of reach.

"I have coached many backs in my career, and that was the best run I have seen here at St. Clements in many years!" said Colin Walsh. Laguerre Charles added a 12 yard run for his first career TD.

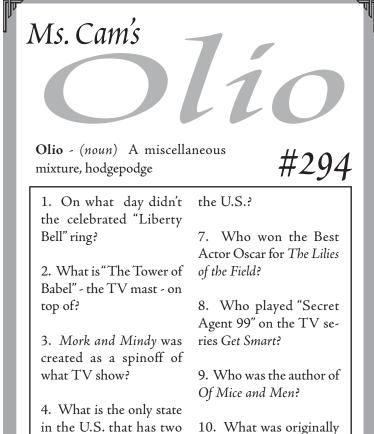

St. Clement finishes the season with a 6-4 record, securing the school's first winning season in 24 years. The Anchormen are looking forward to next season with nearly all of their starters returning.

The St. Clement Anchormen celebrated a hard-fought victory over the Trinity Catholic Falcons last Thursday.

Dozens of fire fighters from both Somerville and Cambridge Fire Departments were called to the scene to rescue occupants of a motor vehicle that was run over by a multi-ton cement truck early Tuesday morning. The rescue was actually a simulation accident that took place on Medford Street in Somerville behind the Holman's Building. Simulations like these take place frequently so that fire fighters can prepare themselves for the times when real situations like this might happen.

Guess who's here for breakfast

Holiday in The 'Ville

The big Holiday in The 'Ville show took place at The Somerville Theatre on Saturday, November 26. Pictured here is the Somerville Swinging Singing Seniors along with the group's Director Jimmy Del Ponte. They performed Rocking Around The Christmas Tree, and Grandma Got Run Over By A Reindeer. The group meets and reherases at The Council on Aging at the TAB building on Mondays at 10:30 a.m. They will also be singing at The Little Sisters and some nursing homes and V and A's around the city.

Red Line delays under discussion

In response to weekend closures of the Davis Square Red Line station, the Somerville Board of Aldermen passed a resolution calling on the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) to discuss mitigation with Mayor Joe Curtatone, Alderman Rebekah Gewirtz and the Somerville Chamber of Commerce.

Citing bus shuttle service as not comparable to subway service and that the substitution causes a decline in economic activity, the Chamber proposed an MBTA a discount advertising and a Shop in Somerville campaign as mitigation for business interruptions.

"It is critical this year that people take a moment and consider their local merchants before spending those precious holiday dollars outside of the city," said Chamber of Commerce Chair Ron Bonney, Jr.. "These local businesses are counted on for so many things, after school jobs, sponsorship of local youth sports, support of local not for profits and their events, these local merchants and their employees are counting on you to keep them in mind," he said.

The weekend Davis Square T station closures are scheduled through March. The Chamber is launching shopinsomerville.com.

tax revenues generated from FRIT's development are expected to cover the annual $1.6 debt service and more.

The Orange Line is now under construction. Preliminary designs presented to community members were received favorably at a public meeting two weeks ago. There were a few questions about parking, but the plan was otherwise praised.

With transit-oriented development realized, said Senior VP of development Don Briggs, the time for real growth can begin, and with it, the first three buildings.

"Without that, all the work that we had done and all the opportunity that was right there on the doorstep would not have been able to get done," said Briggs, who had overseen the expenditure of $110 million before the vote was even made. At the time, Briggs feared nothing would come of the development, and said that FRIT would consider leaving the project. "Now it's just 'when are we going to get going?"

"We're off to the races," he said. Briggs recently unveiled his strategy for the first phase of retail stores, which is currently being planned in conjunction with residential partner, developer Avalon Bay of amounting to a total of 420 rental units and 280,000 sq. ft. of retail space. FRIT has been looking to entice bargain outlet stores, as many as 30 in the initial phase and 50 in total. Called a "bold strategy" by the Boston Globe's Casey Ross, the move signifies FRIT's confidence that retailers will move their outlet stores closer to the population of their consumers. It is a wholesale change in mixed-use urban development that Briggs sees, and perhaps, a change in the entire culture of urban planning, as unorthodox as the agreements between corporation and government that first allowed it to take place.

"[The city and commonwealth] have a lot of confidence in our ability to execute, so now it's up to us to execute," said Briggs.

FRIT is a realty estate investment trust (REIT), which means it does not pay federal taxes as a corporation, but must give out 90 percent of its taxable income to its shareholders in dividends. Owning 18.6 million sq. ft. strategically located in the most prime real estate markets in the country, FRIT has become a model in the industry, raising their dividend rates 44 consecutive years. They currently have a market cap, or stock price multiplied by number of shares, of $5.4 billion.

However, FRIT does not usually take the role of developer. They, like many REITs, usually lease out properties that they own. While their chief talent has been for successfully operating shopping centers, the Assembly Row development is a change in their usual mode of operation, though they have one other similar development in Bethesda, Maryland outside Washington DC. While the beginning phases include mostly the retail, with shops and restaurants as well as a multiplex cinema, Briggs describes a "holistic" approach to building a new popular urban center. Beautification and landscaping of parkland, with a fish pier and adornments like statues, will contribute to the eventual planned 1.75 million sq. ft. in R & D/ commercial / office space, 1.13 million sq. ft. of retail (including IKEA) and 2,100 residential units.

ment," said Briggs. "What we are developing is fairly complex developments that require a lot of upfront capital, require a pretty sophisticated skillset."

Somerville's Assembly Square, fit FRIT's desire to have "a product type that is where we think is where the country is going over the next 50 years, which is urbanizing transit-orient development," which he qualified as a high-risk, high reward proposition.

These risks are manifold. While city planning has applauded the transformation of Assembly Square into a 24hour residential, office-space, shopping, entertainment center, moving from planning to construction has been tarried since FRIT purchased the 45acre plot in 2005.

The entitlements that FRIT was granted at the site were heavily scrutinized. FRIT agreed to pay the $15 million for the Orange Line in 2006, because of a series of lawsuits regarding zoning violations by community members in the Mystic View Task Force. IKEA's dalliance in breaking ground compounded issues involving the I-Cubed grant the development received, necessitating the intricate funding plans that brought forth the Tri-Party agreement. After it was signed in May, Briggs said he "breathed a sigh of relief." "Now we're at the point where we're through all these hurdles, and we're going to invest real money in construction and development," he said. "We are creating a vehicle for growth. We're through the risk period, and now we're onto the development and implementation period. Everybody says that construction is really risky, and it is, but not as risky as it was until we got the Tstop," he said.

Construction and development carries its own risks as well, said Briggs, but they are not as grim as previous. "Can we lease it for what we thought we could lease it for," asked Briggs for example. "Can we build it for what we thought it was going to cost?"

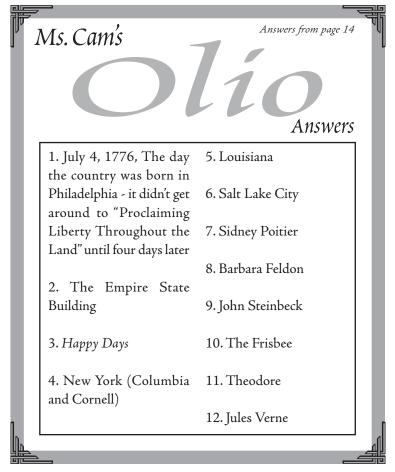

"We are comfortable that we can," he said. "We are through a lot of the uncontrollable risks, and we are now into the quantifiable and presumably controllable risks."

Briggs said that the development opportunities, like the uses for the site are manifold. Technology entrepreneurs and financial services companies that wish to locate near their employee base can choose Somerville for its growing population of collegeeducated young professionals.

"In the case of something like this, when you are trying to bring all those uses together, managing the risk that all those markets are going to be in sync, and you can see today that they are not quite in sync," said Briggs. "The residential multi-family market is off the charts. The retail market for the product that we're doing is strong," he said, referring to the outlet store plan, "but if we were doing a different retail product it might not be strong."

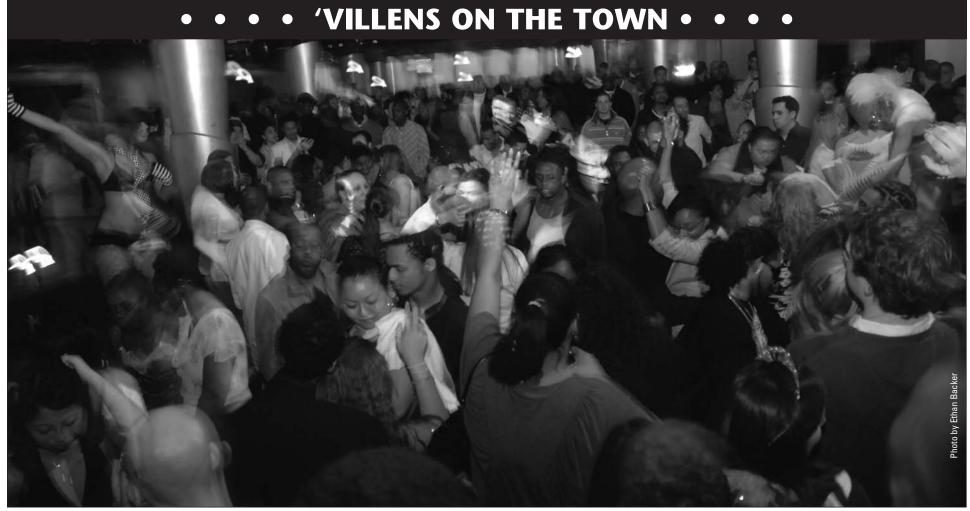

As far as office space and research and development tenants were concerned, Briggs was optimistic that Somerville's location near the Boston entrepreneurial sectors such as Kendall Square and Downtown would ensure that, once buildings began to rise from the barren field, there would be more interest in the fledgling development.

"The office market is just now starting to hopefully become something, it's still not there yet," he said. "We don't know that it will be there yet. It may be another five or 10 years before. Could be that we go through a cycle in the office where it's taking of existing space and there isn't a whole lot of new building.

"We take land that we own that is suburban in character and context and we turn it into highdensity mixed-use develop-

Train a comin'? Questions remain on GLX

By Andrew Firestone

Questions still remain after a phasing timeline was released last week by the design consulttransportation (MassDOT). The plan, which details an opening of service to the proposed Union Square and Washington Street fork of the GLX in 2016, fails to implement the Route 16 stop.

The Route 16 which the Metropolitan Planning Organization included in their long term finance plan, which tags $476 million over the next four years for the GLX. Gov. Deval Patrick recently signed a bill to float out $20 in state bonds as part of the measure.

Conservation Law Foundation lawyer Rafael Mares said that there are many discrepancies still with the plans of Mass-DOT the and state implementation plan revealed in the environmental assessment report in October. Mares says that, aside from the non-inclusion of the Somerville/Medford border stop, the planners have not properly explained why they are delaying. The CLF successfully sued state in 2004 over the GLX, so under the Clean Air Act the project is legally mandated.

"At the same time that they deants of state department of layed for another four years, they seem to be holding on to some vain hope that the Federal "New Starts" money will come through," said Mares. "That is not a reason to delay. They are not putting themselves in a very good position to receive money from the federal government by under-funding their own transportation system. Why wait?" One of the requirements for the federal grant is that the state be sufficiently funding their own system, which is infamously indebted partly due to the Big Dig project.

> He added that it didn't make sense that, a year ago, the planners had not anticipated details in land acquisition and design that prevented a sooner opening. City officials and residents have bombarded the state, and Patrick recently received a letter from Congressman Mike Capuano urging him to not pass the GLX problem onto a successor who may wash his hands of it.

OFF THE SHELF by Doug Holder

Somerville, Bards, Bagels and Co-Existence

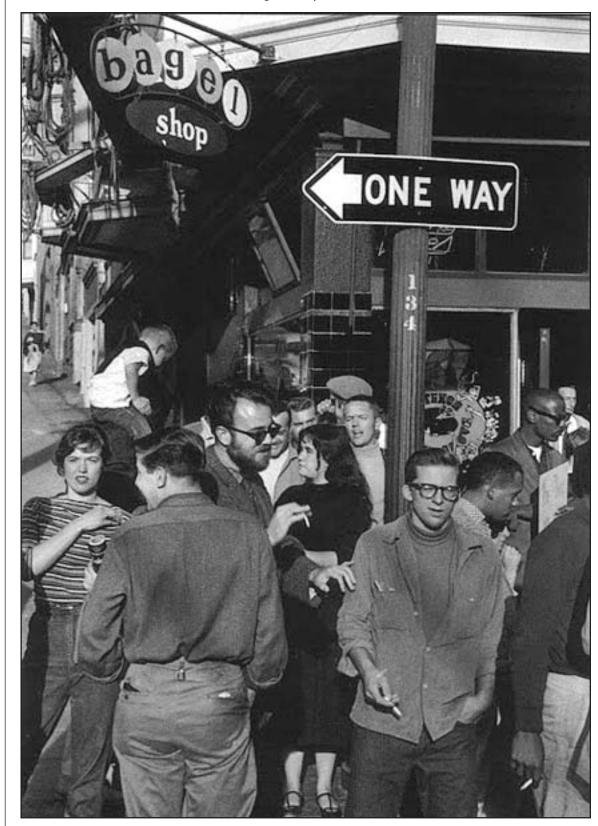

I never thought of this when Somerville resident and poet Harris Gardner and I started the Bagel Bards at Finagle- A- Bagel in Harvard Square in 2004. But I happened to be teaching a Creative Writing class at Endicott College and we were studying the poetry of San Francisco poet A.D. Winans. In an interview I conducted with him (that I used for a class discussion) he mentioned a hangout of his: the Co-Existence Bagel Shop. Bagels, Bards and poetry do have an illustrious history. The Co-Existence Bagel Shop in the 1950's and 60's North Beach section of San Francisco was a big hangout for the likes of Ginsberg, Ferlinghetti, Kaufman, Spicer, Winans, and countless other Beat poets, and poets of other schools. So the Bagel Bards, a group of poets and writers that now meets in the Au Bon Pain in Davis Square, Somerville, Mass (Finagle-A Bagel closed years ago)is a sort of a small coda to this...

Here is a description from a Beat travel guide I found:

"Continue along to 1398 Grant Avenue which is Stop 10. This is the former site of the Co-Existence Bagel shop where a delicatessen "collided" with a beer-joint-hangout and news center. It was immortalized by Bob Kaufman in Bagel Shop Jazz who describing its regulars as "shadow people, blueberry-eyed girls in black stockings, smelling vaguely of mint jelly, turtle neck angel guys, coffeefaced ivy Leaguers..."

To join the Bagel Bards just drop by any Saturday at the Au Bon Pain in Davis Square from 9AM to 12 PM--take a chair, and man you are/there!

Poet Lo Galluccio writes the LYRICAL: "The title of this poem (GRAND FAILED EXPERIMENT) came from the Elvis Costello's song Brilliant Mistake. It's really an apologia to something supernatural that a person couldn't please enough."

GRAND FAILED EXPERIMENT

I'm your grand failed experiment I guess I grabbed an after-dinner mint And on the Star Wars chart, I'm a long blue wave You said you're not very well-behaved as the TV set fell two stories down my pixels screamed in ghostly sound. I'm picking up the mica pieces now. They still exact their change.

Every time you said don't eat you'll last. I didn't have the will to fast. The colors pink and green and blue. Objects wove my hunger through. I sucked them up like sugar glue. I'm your grand failed experiment.

I'm still a childish wonderland. I'm still Alice in a tailspin and I'd like the chance to change back to... I'm your grand failed experiment. I guess I grabbed an after-dinner mint. And on the Star Wars chart, I'm a long blue wave.

The princess looks a Sufi now. In Bjork-like braids of powerful wow. The elephant taught me how to fly. Dark chocolate dances in the sky. I still love the stars all right.

We headed to the millennium. A party situation to the end. The devas dance in white reply. They whispered, "Stay awake all night." "Just stay awake without your sleeping sight." I'm your grand failed experiment.

– Lo Galluccio
