MBTA gets set to lay tracks GLX construction starts this month

Residents can expect traffic disruptions as the rail bridge over Medford Street is rebuilt to add tracks for the coming Green Line Extension.

By Elizabeth Sheeran

After years of discussion and planning, the Green Line Extension is finally moving from the conference room to the job site. Contractor Barletta Heavy Division will start work this month on the first phase of the long-awaited project, which will extend the MBTA light rail through Somerville to Medford, adding six new Green Line stations.

An important first step in the $1.3 billion mass transit project, Phase One takes care of two bridges and a building that stand in the way of plans to lay Green Line tracks alongside the existing commuter rail lines to Fitchburg and Lowell.

The MBTA's commuter rail right-of-way is wide enough to fit the extra tracks in all but two places, where the railway crosses the road on elevated bridges. Barletta will rebuild and widen the rail bridges over Medford Street in Somerville, near the Somerville Avenue Target store, and over Harvard Street in Medford, near Saint Clement School. Phase One also includes demolishing a building on the site of the new Lechmere

Trash to treasure

By Harry Kane

Consuelo Perez, 49, is a Somerville artist who lives in Davis Square. She immigrated to the area in 1987 and has been part of the art community ever since. Perez refers to herself as, "the trouble-maker of the whole city." But really, she's just a friendly Peruvian artist who makes trash into treasure.

Back in Peru, as a young girl, Perez was taught by her mother to knit and sew. They made clothing, sock puppets and toys. They didn't have much money, so Perez had to learn how to be resourceful. It was a colorful time in Perez's life, listening to her grandfather's exaggerated stories of fighting with an octopus and serving in the navy.

No doubt, her unusual upbringing had etched a framework for her future artwork.

Now, many years later, Perez is married and has two daughters. And her house is very colorful, filled with love and spirit. The living room of Perez's house has art projects from wall to wall. They are all made from trash she found in other neighbors' receptacles.

Rumor persists that longtime Ward 3 Alderman, Tom Taylor isn't going to run for re-election this year so that will make it wide open in the ward for the seat. Several names are popping up all over the ward. We hear Bob McWaters, the popular political pundit here in the Ville, mentioned. Never mind the fact that he would be an early favorite who might consider running. With his experience, he would run for all the right reasons. not like some others. We also hear that Matt Capobianco, whom some have said is a Republican, might run and the name that keeps coming up again and again in Ward 3 is former Mayor Dorothy Kelly Gay, who is getting a lot of calls, we hear. We even heard someone would be willing to donate a campaign headquarters for her. We hear that there might be more names mentioned in weeks to come.

In Ward 5, Mark "the Shark" (his Tufts College days nickname) Niedergang is out there campaigning and spreading nasty rumors, we hear, about the incumbent, Continued on page 8

Response to Sláinte Somerville!

Rosalie says:

I'm glad this race was so much fun for the runners and the bars who made money on it, but for anyone who lives in the triangle from Cedar St. to Teele Square, Highland Ave. to Broadway, you were unable to leave that triangle for at least 3 hours on Sunday. That left people stranded, unable to get to work, unable to get to the grocery store, unable to visit a sick relative, unable to get to church, etc., etc., so that a bar could have a road race. These races are becoming far too frequent and far to disruptive. Why is the bike path not utilized rather than 2 major thoroughfares? Who is paying for the police overtime? How much do the organizers pay to the city for the privilege of usurping so much of the city for 3 hours? And why, in a city the size of Somerville, do they allow a race with 5,000 registered runners?

Courtney O'Keefe says:

I would like to see the City reconsider the locations of the SomerStreets events to streets situated near parks, along the Community Path or other open space around Somerville-rather than closing down major thoroughfares. Franey Road by Trum Field is a better location for a SomerStreets event than Highland Avenue, as an example.

mememe says:

Seems like ridiculously obvious answer, but considering our dear leader... City claiming it needs more revenue, including to fix up/ expand streets. To many people putting claims on street time? Offer bidding to run races each year. Say we only want 5 races a year, bid on the right to manage it. 5 highest bidders get the weekend they want, picked in the order from most to least.

Greater access initiative for off-leash dogs

By Harry Kane

An increase in recreational areas for off-leash dogs is under consideration after a recent Board of Alderman meeting on March 14. Dogs may soon be allowed more access to run free during designated times in specified open spaces.

At-Large Alderman Dennis Sullivan submitted the resolution for a program to grant dog owners and dogs more availability for off-leash play and exercise time. "The concern was that we have great dog parks here in Somerville," Sullivan said. "But, they're not accessible easily, except by car."

There are currently three off-leash recreational areas in Somerville, but some residents say, not enough. Expanding access to existing parks would make life easier for dog owners.

"If you live in West Somerville, you're driving your car to Ward 3 or Ward 1 to enjoy the dog park," Sullivan said, referring to commuting time.

Another issue under discussion includes the overuse of dog parks by dog-walking businesses.

Sullivan often takes his dog to Zero New Washington Park. This 0.75 acre dog-playground is located at the corner of Inner belt Road, close to the Holiday Inn.

"You'll see a van pull up and they'll be a nondescript dog walking service, and out will come ten dogs with the dog walker. We're augmenting that person's business and we're not getting anything for it," said Sullivan.

People from Malden, Charlestown and Melrose, among other communities, are also coming to use Somerville dog parks.

Melrose resident Sheila Barry brings her 11-month-old beagle, Mia, to Zero New Washington Park because the park in Malden is not as play friendly. "This is the only park I know," Barry said, while watching Mia play with the other dogs.

The off-leash dog initiative could seek to duplicate what the city of Brookline has done, which is named The Green Dog program. In Brookline there is an annual fee of $50 for residents and a $100 for non-residents.

Brian Davis, President of Som Dog, a non-profit organization advocating for canine rights said, "I would be shocked and surprised if the city of Somerville ever taxed a resident. I doubt that could happen."

Davis thinks local business dog-walkers may have to pay-up for the use of the park, and that would help cover the cost for another dog officer.

"We're pumped, because this would essentially mean that dogs would get to run in specific parks on green grass, and that would be exciting for us," Davis said.

Ward 2 Alderman Mayann Heuston is in support of the new program but has some reservations.

"I know that there are several parks in my Ward that people are very concerned about off-leash dogs," she said.

Lincoln Park residents are especially concerned about off-leash dogs, according to Heuston. In the past, leash laws have been violated along the bike path.

"They've had some issues over the years," Heuston said. "I think we have to take it on a park-by-park basis."

Ward 5 resident Courtney O'Keefe likes the idea of the new off-leash dog program. She said it would encourage dog owners to use these designated parks at specified times, rather than try and sneak-in with off-leashed dogs on the community path.

"To have something like this...I think would alleviate unleashed dogs in other areas where they're not allowed to be unleashed. It's giving residents an option, and your giving dogs an option to run freely," O'Keefe said.

O'Keefe believes that animal control officers and Somerville Police Department have made significant progress in deterring dog owners from letting their dogs run wild along the bike path. "Even though it's still a problem," she said, "it's nothing to the extent of what it used to be."

Our four-legged friends are looking for more places to play freely in Somerville, and they just may be getting them soon.

O'Keefe just hopes that if there is an annual fee for joining the off-leash dog program, that it would cost less than the Brookline program. She's hopeful there will be a compromise.

"It's really about having a good harmony and a good balance between people who do own dogs and people who don't own dogs," she said.

Al Weisz is a Somerville resident who uses Zero New Washington Park many times a week. He has a black Labrador named Stella. "I think more off-leashed hours would be beneficial to the dogs and the city," said Weisz.

"The parks would get used. It's a great idea."

At-Large Alderman Bruce Desmond weighed-in with his opinion. "With this type of service or opening parks up, comes a lot of problems. People from the outside, people not following the rules, so there's a lot of policing that goes on with this for it to go correctly," he said.

The item has been referred to the Committee on Housing and Community Development, chaired by Ward 4 Alderman Tony Lafuente.

The Somerville Police Department, the Animal Control Department and the Som Dog organization all will be part of the community conversation.

anymore," Perez says. She's been sorting through trash for too long to care anymore.

Sometimes Perez even employs the help of a homeless woman. "She comes by the neighborhood and usually when I see her I ask her to collect bottles." In return Perez gives her a few dollars or buys her lunch. The woman gladly goes through other people's trash in search of the hidden gems Perez needs for her artwork.

Perez has been making art from recycled bottles and cans for many years – from abstract pieces to jewelry and everything in-between.

"It's all in the blood – esta en la sangre," she says. Many of her family members back in Peru are artists as well.

There's no lack of creativity in her art studio. A giant green lizard made of recycled bottles and scraps of trash, all colorfully painted, and adorned with Christmas-style lights, chills out on her wooden cabinet.

In the windowsill sits a pig made recycled juice bottles. On the wall, a collage is made of Cheeto bags.

Her inspiration comes from the shapes of the bottles and her imagination.

Her latest project started while she was on her way home. One day Perez was driving through Union Square and she saw a bottle underneath a car. She stopped her car, got out, and picked up the bottle. That's when she got the inspiration for a new creature. The shape of the bottle reminded her of a turkey's leg. Later she found that her neighbor had a Korean syrup bottle that worked perfectly for the head of the turkey. And, she'd already been collecting fur that will be used as the feathers.

Piece by piece she's putting the creature together.

Another project idea came from finding small green water bottles, which made her think about The Incredible Hulk and Frankenstein. "That was the beginning of how I came up with it. Little by little I started looking for the pieces." She calls it, "Incredible Juice Man." His feet are made of Listerine bottles, his arms are orange juice bottles and his legs are 2 liter Ginger Ale bottles.

From a bottle-capped sheep to skeleton's feet made of Aunt Jemima syrup bottles, Perez does it all, turning trash into treasure.

THE WEEK IN CRIME

By Jim Clark

Don't go away mad...

Police were dispatched to the intersection of Willow Ave. and Broadway late last Friday night on reports that several individuals were engaged in a street brawl. Upon arrival, the officers found three men struggling to hold one other man down on the ground, according to reports.

Inquiries by police officers revealed that the men attempting to restrain the individual on the ground were the owner of the Powderhouse Pub and two of his employees. The bar personnel were reportedly trying to hold the man until police arrived. It was alleged that the man being held, Cord Deal, 21, of Medford, had smashed the plate glass window of the pub after being asked to leave the establishment. Security personnel at the club reportedly told police that Deal had become belligerent in the bar and was asked to leave. Deal reportedly attempted to reenter the bar but was refused entry. Witnesses told police that they observed Deal outside of the bar throwing a trash can to the ground. Deal then reportedly hurled a rock through the club's plate glass window, according to witness testimony.

Upon questioning, Deal reportedly admitted that he was asked to leave the club and that he tried to go back in and was turned away, but he said that he did not remember breaking the window. Deal was placed under arrest and charged with destruction of property over $250.

The Guidance Center opens a new Somerville location

By Cathleen Twardzik

At the recent open house of The Guidance Center's newest location, 12 Tyler St. in Somerville, Mayor of Curtatone was present to cut the ribbon and to give a short speech.

The open house provided people a chance to visit the programs at the new location, which include early intervention, intensive family services and care coordination services (CSA). The center's services concentrate on intervention, prevention and family support.

The center is a service of Riverside Community Care, which provides children's mental health services in Somerville and Cambridge. "The Guidance Center provides an array of integrated programs that help children and their families cope with developmental, mental health, social and behavioral difficulties, as well as a range of disabilities," said Katie Welch, Director of Development and Marketing of Riverside Community Care and The Guidance Center.

The center's major goals focus on the fact that it was, "Designed to build on the strengths and resilience of families. Our programs create lasting change for the families we touch, [for] their neighbors and for the whole community. We support the goals of all parents, to see their children grow into young adults who have healthy relationships with family and friends, thrive in school and envision a hopeful future. We aim to be a 'one-stop-shop' for families, with a range of services under one roof, a trusted place where they can return if they need to," said Welch.

Additional services which are available include: child and family counseling, child witness to violence programs, a therapeutic after school, expert care coordination, supervised visitation and intensive stabilization and reunification services.

"We aim to be a 'one-stop-shop' for families..."

The Guidance Center has four locations located in Somerville and Cambridge. They include: 12 Tyler St. in Somerville, 111 South St. in Somerville, the main office, 5 Sacramento St. in Cambridge and 810 Memorial Drive.

Children between the ages of pre-birth to 22 are served at the center.

"The Guidance Center's model is to serve children and families together, and within the context of a broader network of support: schools, pediatricians, mentors, religious communities," she said.

The center offers predominantly home-based services, which refers to work, done with children and their families at their home or in "other natural environments."

The Guidance Center was founded in 1954 as an independent mental health center and has grown into the leading provider of innovative, family-centered programs for children and families in Cambridge and Somerville.

"The most unique part of The Guidance Center is our ability to combine excellent therapeutic and clinical care with concrete support like food and housing assistance. We know that basic needs must be met before a child or parent can focus on their therapeutic goals. The Guidance Center's many community donors, partners and friends allow us to provide this kind of enhanced support," said Welch.

"The Guidance Center's goal is to continue to provide the highest-quality, most innovative and effective services. The year 2014 will be our 60th year of service," she said.

On April 11, The Guidance Center will hold a fundraising event, the Celebrating Families Gala, which is essential to their organization. That will be the center's 10th annual gala, and the event's keynote speaker will be Victoria Kennedy.

Individuals who are interested in that event may contact Ashlie Williams at (617) 354-2275.

The Somerville News Historical Fact of the Week

Eagle feathers #22

The first Big Dig

By Bob (Monty) Doherty

This year we saw a lot of snow fall in and around Boston. And as we all learned (as if we didn't already know), shoveling is hard work, even of it's just the light, fluffy stuff.

How would you like to shovel a ditch over 3½ feet deep, 33 feet wide and 24¼ miles long? My guess is, no matter how long it is, given the choice between the two, you'd pick your snow-filled driveway.

The historic truth is that the former option was actually achieved. It took ten years, but with shovels in hand, the Middlesex farmers dug the Middlesex Canal, which ran from Lowell to Charlestown. The Canal went through Somerville and eight other towns, finally ending in Boston.

In essence, the massive undertaking was Massachusetts's first "big dig." It was an engineering project of immense complexity for its time. It encompassed not only the digging of the canal itself, but also the construction of nearly 50 bridges, 20 locks and 8 aqueducts. The source of the water for the Middlesex Canal was the Concord River. For 50 years (1803 to 1853), the historic Concord River water, in the form of the Middlesex Canal, ran through the entire length of Somerville.

At the time, the canal was needed to help the City of Lowell and to export and import goods efficiently from Boston. Before the birth of the canal, the only way to move materials was via narrow and rut-ridden pathways traversed by wagon. With the canal, boats filled to the brim were towed by horses along walkways on each side of the canal.

It is difficult to articulate the ground breaking (pardon the pun) impact of the canal because we now live in a time filled with railroads, planes, highways and paved roads. For over 25 years, the canal was the main means of transportation between Lowell and Boston, until the train came into existence in approximately 1835. Ironically enough, the canal towed the very supplies that would be used to build the railroad that would eventually put the canal out of business.

Though the main purpose of the canal was commerce, its history is not without stories of notable personalities of the time who traveled it for pleasure. People would visit the canal both in the summer and winter, because once the canal froze, it became a marathon-length ice skating lane. The great Henry David Thoreau, author of the book Walden (1854), as well as A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers (1849), is one such person and the famed statesman of his time, Daniel Webster (namesake of Somerville's Webster Avenue) is another.

The canal was a pioneering enterprise that more than served its purpose for the time. Memorial markers sprinkle the length of what was once the thriving waterway that is mostly filled in today. In Somerville alone, four memorial markers mark the path of the canal. One can be found on the Medford/Somerville line on Boston Avenue at Alewife Brook Parkway. One is in front of St. Polycarp's Church. There is yet another at Foss Park, and the final marker lies by the East Somerville Library. Additionally, Somerville's Canal Lane and Middlesex Avenue are named after the canal, as is Boston's Canal Street.

So the next time you find yourself sitting in traffic and looking over in awe at the Big Dig, know that the first "big dig" was no less remarkable and just happened to run through your home town.

Doyle and Casey: Bringing the green to Somerville

By Rose Scherlis

On March 6, Irish folk rock came to Somerville, courtesy of Somerville Theatre in Davis Square. John Doyle and Karan Casey performed for the packed theatre, with John Doyle on acoustic guitar and vocals, and Karan Casey singing. Other instruments were incorporated into the act.

After performing the final song of their set, a cover of Nightengale, John Doyle and Karan Casey went on to perform an encore of three more songs, ending with False Lady. The musicians received a standing ovation at the end of their concert.

A Berkeley professor who recently moved to Somerville called John Doyle and Karan Casey's performance "a beautiful mixture of traditional and original tunes." "I love Davis Square," He said. "There are amazing concerts so close to home."

David McCloughlan, a writer, director, and producer, said of John Doyle and Karan Casey, "They transcend the genre, like Ella Fitzgerald or Joe Pass." McCloughlan is best known for writing the film Southie.

"They have a great sense of humor," David Leveille, a fan of Celtic music, said. "The performance was, in one word, amazing."

John Doyle was born in Ireland. He started playing guitar when he was 11 years old, and became a professional musician at 16 years of age. The first bands he performed in were Chanting House, and Killera, both of which performed in Ireland.

"Irish people have gone to every corner of the globe, you can go to China and meet someone Irish there. It is amazing that the Irish nation has extended out so far for such a little country," John Doyle said. Doyle and Casey have toured Japan, as well as Canada, and many European and South American countries.

Doyle has performed in Boston previously, including many performances in Somerville. His first performance in the Greater Boston area was at Johnny D's in Somerville. "Each place is so different, I enjoy the states because I am used to the people here, there's a good report and a good liveliness, and people know how to enjoy it," Doyle said.

John Doyle will be performing again in Somerville on Wednesday, May 1, at The Burren in Davis Square. Tickets are still available.

John Doyle and Karan Casey bring their unique brand of Irish folk stylings to contemporary audiences.

Station in Cambridge.

Widening the Medford Street bridge will take most of 2013 and into early next year. Most of the time, the work can move along by closing only one lane of Medford Street at a time. But Barletta Project Manager Seta Kalajjian said the contractor will need to block the street completely for two to four weekends in late summer or early fall. She said the road closures won't be on back-to-back weekends, and they'll work around planned street festivals.

Rebuilding the Harvard Street bridge will take longer and have more of an impact on the neighborhood. It involves constructing over 800 feet of retaining wall, erecting noise barriers, and raising both the bridge and the road underneath it by over a foot. Barletta will also widen and re-route a drainage pipe from private backyards to nearby Winchester Street, to alleviate chronic flooding problems under the bridge during all but the worst storms.

The work is planned to last until late-2014 and will require rolling lane closures on both Harvard and Winchester Streets. On at least a half-dozen weekends starting this September and continuing next spring, Barletta will have to completely close down a stretch of Harvard Street, which is a common pass-through route for traffic going from Interstate 93 to Powderhouse Circle and Davis Square.

Kalajjian said Barletta is working closely with the cities of Somerville, Medford and Cambridge to manage traffic disruptions, is directly in touch with resident abutters, and has an active plan to contain rodent problems. It will be posting two-week "look-ahead" work and road closure schedules online at www.greenlineextension.org. And residents can call the Emergency Construction Hotline any time at 1-855-GLX-INFO.

Most residents who attended a March 14 public meeting in Somerville saw little of concern in the plans for Phase One. "The only thing that's going to happen is that there's going to be a lot of traffic and people aren't going to be happy about that. But we have that now," said Ellin Reisner of the Somerville Transportation Equity Partnership (STEP), a local transit advocacy group.

"It's as real as it's been"

Meeting attendees were just as interested in what's ahead with Phase Two of the Green Line Extension project, which includes extending the Green Line from Lechmere Station as far as a new station at Washington Street on the main line, and to Union Square on a spur line. Phase Two construction is set to begin in mid-2014 and run through 2016, so the first passengers should ride into Union Square sometime in mid-2017.

Phase Three entails building a new maintenance facility in the Inner Belt area, to house all the extra cars that will be needed to service the extended line, and the final four stations will go online in Phase Four. MBTA planners said there's a lot that can happen over the next six years with such a complicated project, but right now they project a 50 percent probability that the entire line will be operational by sometime in 2019.

That's still a long way out. But for supporters who have been waiting years for more public transit in Somerville, the Phase One start is a sign that it's finally becoming a reality.

"We had the first public meeting in Somerville the night the Red Sox won the World Series against Saint Louis and broke the curse," said Reisner, who noted that STEP is now over a decade old. "Now they've got a contractor and they're starting construction. It's as real as it's been."

TALES OF SOMERVILLE

Illustrated by Jim Clark

Are there just too many races going on?

The View From Prospect Hill

It's not as though we have anything against athletics in general or big city-sponsored events in particular. These are, at their core, fine things for a community to participate in and support.

Is it necessary, however, for us to be underwriting and putting up with so many of them with such frequency?

Many residents are getting the feeling that an inordinate number of these foot races are taking place, blocking public thoroughfares for hours on end, and generally creating a lot of inconvenience for those who would rather not be bothered by them.

Perhaps it is time for serious discussion regarding setting some limits on the number of such events that should take place over a given period of time. That and taking into consideration limiting of the number of participants to be allowed in any one race. Fewer numbers of runners would shorten the duration of these events, thus alleviating some of the problems faced by residents who feel inconvenienced by having their streets blocked off and filled with hoards of sweaty runners, as well as the onlookers who invariably gather and monopolize the sidewalks and open spaces of their neighborhoods.

It has also been suggested that alternate routes could be established that would avoid blocking off residential and commercial districts so severely. Perhaps a combination of using the Community Path and some other well-chosen, less used back roads might be useful in helping to ease the pain of those who have had enough 5K fever for their liking.

These events can be fun and often contribute financially to worthy charitable causes. Nobody really wants them to go away, but couldn't they possibly go a little less often and with better consideration for the comfort and well being of all Somerville residents?

Sean O'Donovan. We hope that's not true. We were hoping it would be a campaign on issues, not name calling like some of the leftists here in the city have resorted to. We know that Sean has made it clear he's going to run a clean campaign here in the city and letting the voters of Ward 5 know he's done a great job, and to return him to the board of Alderman. By the way, is it us or does he list that his employment is the School Committee? We heard he's one of those "trust fund" babies. You know, that NYC lower Manhattan crowd. It's just speculation, but that rumor has been out there a while. In the old days we would call them "Limousine Liberals!"

Over in Ward 4, the incumbent Alderman Tony LaFuente is busy trying to get Winter Hill on the drawing board for the city, making it a destination and place to be in the near future. He's been working hard, meeting the residents and having local neighborhood meetings. So far, we hear of no one that wants to take him on, and since some of us Newstalkers live in Ward 4 we know he's doing a good job.

Word has it that at a recent event here in the city at Holiday Inn, that some made remarks about Representative Carl Sciortino and his demeanor and announcements that he wants to run for a seat not even emptied yet by Congressman Markey. We hear that some politicians over in Medford, which Carl also represents as part of his district, are not happy with him. We heard from a source that maybe Carl had better watch out. We heard of a concerted effort going on to get a well-known politician to run for Carl's seat. It seems that Carl says he's not in other races but keeps speaking with forked tongue!

Speaking about political moves, those that watched the South Boston St. Patrick's Day Breakfast on television this past Sunday might have noticed our own Mayor Joe Curtatone was in the crowd. Word is that he just might be ready to announce his run for Governor any time now. We will keep you up to speed as soon as we hear more.

On May 3rd 1913 they were constituted here in Somerville and have been thriving ever since. The Order of Eastern Star is the world's oldest men's and women's fraternity. Getting happier by the minute

By Joseph A. Curtatone

Last year, Somerville became the first city in the United States to measure residents' happiness as a way to more fully understand how municipal government can better serve our constituents, and create policies that reflect resident satisfaction with those policies.

Following in the footsteps of countries like Bhutan and France, we partnered with Harvard University Psychology Professor, Daniel Gilbert, to issue our first-ever Happiness Survey, designed to help us collect data to shape those policy discussions, aligning residents' needs and city services to our overarching goal of making Somerville a great place to live, work, play and raise a family.

I have always suspected that residents of Somerville are happier than the average citizen. Somervillians are proud of their city, they are engaged and connected, and it is reflected in the number of times people tell me how happy they are to live in a hip, vibrant community. Everything we do in Somerville is aligned around that one orienting value, and it's working. If you were to develop a momentum index for communities in Massachusetts, taking into account all the improvements we've made, all of the improvements to come, the activity in our city squares, the gains made by our school system, our increasing green and recreational space, Somerville would be off the charts in first place. There's nothing like us right now.

In the last several years, we have been lauded by a variety of reputable new sources and national agencies as one of the best place to live and, based on the results of the original Happiness Survey, it has a lot to do with the fact that, on average, residents are extremely happy with their city and the direction we're headed.

We know that our inclusive approach to government is working. What we want to understand is how our policies affect subjective happiness, whether programs like our increasing our tree canopy or Zero Sort Recycling have any bearing on why individuals and family choose to move to, and remain in our city. But how can you even measure something like happiness, a lot of people ask, and why does City Hall want to know? What does it matter that Somerville residents ranked themselves 7.7 out of 10 on our "Happiness Scale?"

It matters because governments can learn a lot about the relationship between policy and wellbeing simply by asking. As Professor Gilbert put it, "Social policies are always meant to promote things that promote happiness, so how could it be a bad idea to measure directly the very thing you are trying to maximize?"

When we initiate a new program, or build a park, we hope that it will ultimately make people happier, creating a ripple effect in the community in terms of resident happiness, home values, and the overall structure of our community. I have argued that you cannot govern a city by only paying attention to its bond rating, or what is contained in the four corners of its budget document. Metrics like borrowing capacity Continued on page 11

Early Somerville Living Built Character

If the door closes, look for a window

By Paul Maisano

The sweltering hot summer nights were growing less frequent. That huge elm tree across the street with its small oval shaped green leaves will soon shed its umbrella. The late night cheering crowds shall grow silent as the softball season ends, and the lights shall go dark at Glen Park. Autumn is upon the doorstep of our East Somerville neighborhood.

That famous junkyard bicycle will soon be put away for the winter. It was great to ride around the neighborhood this summer. I'll never forget the Irish man's laugh when I showed him what it finally looked like completed in late July.

The school year starts in a few days. I am entering my second year at the Saint Benedict school. My mother has surprised me with a new pair of pants, a new shirt, and a nice pair of "hand me down" shoes that my cousin Michael hardly wore.

Our classes are taught by the sisters of St. Joseph. They are called nuns. When they stand together they remind me of a bunch of penguins. I often see them whispering to each other. I can never make out what they are saying, all dressed up in their long black robes. They have these pure white heavily starched bibs on the front of their uniforms. It looks like a piece of hard cardboard.

I often wondered if they have hair on their heads. You can't see any with that boxy cap they wear. I think they shaved their heads. Those hats seemed to fit like a glove.

The boss priest of the St. Benedicts' parish is Father Hogan. He is very tough. He walks around nodding his head, and clasping his hands together when he gives his approval. I have never seen him angry.

When he walks someplace, he walks fast, like he is late, or after someone. Rumor has it that his friend, Cardinal Cushing, was going to give him a promotion soon to Monsignor. I'm sure he could use the raise.

Every year Father Hogan

comes up with a new way of raising money to support the school bills. As if the twenty-five cents we give every Monday isn't enough. I added it up times 35 kids in my class. That's serious cash!

This year they are giving us boxes of religious Christmas cards to sell. It is to help pay for the school oil bill. Sometimes the boiler room door is open. You can hear that thing rumbling like a freight train. I once heard Mr. Crowley say, "That monster drinks oil like water."

Somerville—where the stars come out

We all know by now that President Obama once lived in Somerville. But there are lots of other famous people that have been in and out of Somerville as well. I am taking everyone's word that the following events are true.

I recently asked my friends who was the most famous person they had ever seen visiting Somerville. I got a flood of very interesting responses.

The people mentioned that I was most impressed by were actually members of the same family, The Kennedys. One guy who lives on my street saw John F. Kennedy and his Brother Robert in Davis Square. Ted visited Somerville High School and Davis Square also. Another friend saw Jackie O on Temple Street in 1960.

Hillary Clinton visited the Edgerly school years ago.

One of my favorite experiences was when Dick Enberg and Merlin Olsen spent a couple of hours at The Embassy Lounge on Somerville Ave. in the late 70' or early 80's. They were in town to broadcast a Pat's game and just popped in. A friend bought former Detroit Piston Bill Laimbeer a beer at the Surrey Room. Celtics legend Bill Russell was at a Somerville corner store years ago. Cambridge Rindge and Latin alum Patrick Ewing was seen frequently in the Ville. A friend told me she crashed her car into his once. Former Red Sox pitcher Luis Tiant was hanging out at a house on Belmont St., and Mo Vaughn was at Lincoln Park Community School. Hulk Hogan actually dropped into my daughter's birthday party at the Holiday Inn in Somerville back around 1994.

Actor Chris Evans was at the Mount Vernon for his grandmother's' birthday party. He is Somerville coach Tom Hellen's cousin.

A select number of people got the privilege of seeing U2 at The Somerville Theatre back in 2009, but rock stars have always hung around Somerville. The J Geils Band played at Somerville High decades ago and Aerosmith had a rehearsal space on Lowell St. for years. They also used the Somerville Police prison cell to for an album photo shoot. Other famous rockers who performed in the Ville were Bo Diddley, Peter Tork of The Monkees, The Guess Who, and The Grass Roots.

"Da Schnoz" himself, Jimmy Durante visited Somerville High once, and former fitness guru and actress Jane Fonda was seen at Brighams on Winter Hill in 1980. Remember Nan's Sub shop across from the High School? Actors Patty Duke and John Astin were former customers. Kevin Spacey performed his Bobby Darin act at The Somerville Theatre and a guy I work with saw Tom Cruise at a house party in the early 1980's. Continued on page 21

SIX HOURS TO REVIEW BILL (H 2015)

House 29-125, rejected a new rule that would require copies of all bills scheduled for a vote by a committee to be available to the members of the committee electronically at least six hours prior to their consideration.

Supporters of the new rule said representatives are often given little time to read bills before being asked to vote on them.

Opponents said most committees give representatives adequate time to read the measures. (A "Yes" vote is for the six-hour requirement. A "No" vote is against it.)

Rep. Denise Provost	No
Rep. Carl Sciortino	No
Rep. Timothy Toomey	No

ALLOW UNLIMITED DEBATE (H 2013)

House 29-126, rejected a new rule that would prevent members from making motions to limit debate on any piece of legislation or amendment.

Supporters of the new rule said limiting debate stifles free speech and the exchange of important information. They pointed to a recent incident when the House voted to limit debate to one hour while considering dozens of amendments.

Opponents said unlimited debate will lead to standstills similar to the ones in Washington. They said there are few if any examples of limited debate. (A "Yes" vote is for unlimited debate. A "No" vote is against it.)

Rep. Denise Provost	No
Rep. Carl Sciortino	No
Rep. Timothy Toomey	No

ALLOW MORE BUDGET AMENDMENTS (H 2013)

House 29-126, rejected a new rule that would allow members to file amendments to the annual $30 billion plus state budget at any time up until the budget is approved. Current rules require members to propose their amendments within 72 hours after release of the details of the budget.

Supporters of the new rule said limiting the time for proposing amendments is misguided and anti-democratic.

Opponents said allowing unlimited time to offer amendments could result in weeks of budget debate or a standstill. (A "Yes" vote is for allowing more time to file amendments. A "No" vote is against allowing it.)

Rep. Denise Provost	No
Rep. Carl Sciortino	No
Rep. Timothy Toomey	No

NO COMMITTEE ROLL CALLS ON WEBSITE

- The House and Senate have approved a set of compromise joint rules under which the Legislature will operate during the 2013-2014 session. A few weeks ago, each branch had passed a different version. Noticeably missing from the compromise package is a rule, originally approved by the Senate but rejected by the House, that would require joint committee votes cast by legislators on bills heard by their committees to be posted on the Legislature's website. Senate leaders finally deferred to the House and agreed to drop the provision. Current rules require these committee votes to be kept at the Statehouse in the offices of the committee, available for public inspection upon reasonable notice and during regular office hours.

Supporters of the new rule said it would have given people quick and easy access to the committee votes of their legislators. They noted that under current rules, a person has to drive to Boston during business hours in order to obtain this information. They said requiring a trip of perhaps hundreds of miles is ridiculous and archaic.

Some opponents said the idea is a good one but the website is not yet ready technologically to implement this system. Others argued the posting would be confusing. Some noted that the current process of allowing a person to come to the Statehouse to get these roll calls is sufficient and has worked well for years.

Ironically, the compromise package was approved in both branches by a voice vote, without a roll call.

MEDICAL MARIJUANA

- Attorney General Martha Coakley's Office ruled that cities and towns are not permitted to enact a total ban on marijuana treatment centers. The ruling was in response to a Town of Wakefield by-law imposing the ban. Coakley concluded that the Wakefield ban conflicted with the law, passed by the voters in 2012, that ensures reasonable access to marijuana treatment centers. She concluded that the law's purpose cannot be served if a community prohibits treatment centers within its borders because it would leave the door open for all communities to do so, eventually making it possible that there would be no access anywhere in the state.

In a separate ruling, Coakley ruled that communities are permitted to impose a temporary moratorium on establishing centers while it conducts planning studies and waits until May for the state Department of Public Health regulations concerning these centers.

WAMPANOAG CASINO

- Gov. Patrick announced that he has reached an agreement in principle with the Mashpee Wampanoag tribe, allowing it to build a casino in Taunton. More details have to be worked out and the deal has to be approved by the Legislature.

HEARINGS GETTING UNDERWAY

- Hearings

on the thousands of bills filed for the 2013-2014 session are finally getting underway. On March 27, at 2 p.m. in Room A-1, the Election Laws Committee will hear testimony on several proposed amendments to the state's constitution including:

AT-LARGE SENATORS (S 10) - Provides that the state's 40 senators be elected at-large by all voters.

REDISTRICTING (S 11) - Establishes a non-legislative redistricting commission to draw Massachusetts legislative and congressional districts every ten years. Currently, the constitution simply gives the Legislature itself the power to draw the districts.

LT. GOV. VACANCY (H 61) - Allows the governor to appoint a Lt. governor if that position becomes vacant. The governor's choice would be subject to confirmation by the Legislature. Currently if the Lt. governor's office becomes vacant, there is no provision to appoint a replacement and the office simply remains vacant until the next regular election.

QUOTABLE QUOTES - Special "Fun with Gov. Deval Patrick Edition"

Gov. Deval Patrick made his regular monthly appearance on Jim Braude and Margery Eagan's radio show. The duo's show has moved from the now defunct WTKK to public radio 89.7 WGBH. These are some of the governor's lighter moments.

(singing) "Memories, not a sound from the pavement." – Patrick singing "Memories" from the musical "Cats" to Jim and Margery when they talked about the "old days" at WTKK.

"I've been admonished to stop saying that we need an adult conversation about taxes because some members on Beacon Hill feel that I am referring to them as children which is not my intention. So, what I mean is we need a sober conversation." – Patrick to caller who congratulated the governor on his calling for an adult conversation about taxes.

"If we can't pick Earth, Wind and Fire, I don't really know what we're talking about." – Patrick, a huge fan of the singing group Earth, Wind and Fire, when Braude tried to pin him down on whether "Roadrunner" by Modern Lovers or "Dream On" by Aerosmith should be the state's official rock song.

"I noticed that Margery was only boogying here on the first song, not the second." – Patrick pointing out that when both rock songs were played in the studio, Margery only danced to "Roadrunner."

HOW LONG WAS LAST WEEK'S SESSION? Beacon Hill Roll Call tracks the length of time that the House and Senate were in session each week. Many legislators say that legislative sessions are only one aspect of the Legislature's job and that a lot of important work is done outside of the House and Senate chambers. They note that their jobs also involve committee work, research, constituent work and other matters that are important to their districts. Critics say that the Legislature does not meet regularly or long enough to debate and vote in public view on the thousands of pieces of legislation that have been filed. They note that the infrequency and brief length of sessions are misguided and lead to irresponsible late night sessions and a mad rush to act on dozens of bills in the days immediately preceding the end of an annual session.

During the week of March 11-15, the House met for a total of 37 minutes while the Senate met for a total of two hours and 31 minutes.

Mon. March 11	House 11:06 a.m. to 11:16 a.m. Senate 11:03 a.m. to 11:29 a.m.
Tues. March 12	No House session No Senate session
Wed. March 13	No House session No Senate session
Thurs. March 14	House 11:03 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. Senate 1:00 p.m. to 3:05 p.m.
Fri. March 15	No House session No Senate session

and crime rates per capita are important, but they only tell part of the story. Happiness data help us fill in the picture by giving a more reliable estimate of how our policies and programs impact wellbeing.

Countries all over the world are recognizing the importance of measuring happiness, from Bhutan to the UK's happiness index. Surprisingly, though, many U.S. cities are slow to follow suit. When we made the front page of the Sunday New York Times simply by sending out a citywide survey, I thought other mayors would insist on their own happiness indices. Really, what is the purpose of a government if not to enhance the wellbeing of the public? We are public servants, and we should be focused on making your life better. As evidenced by the original study, most respondents feel we are moving in the right direction.

But we're not done. As we continue to learn and grow along with our ever changing and expanding resident base, we must also adapt our policies and programs to reflect their changing needs to maintain quality of life. Which is why, as many residents may already have noticed, we are again collecting data this year. The difference is that we now have a benchmark by which we can measure change. Based on resident input and feedback in our initial survey, new questions will focus on detailed information affecting happiness, such as "How safe do you feel in your neighborhood?" for example. We want to truly understand how our policies affect daily life in our neighborhoods and squares. We want to understand where we might better allocate resources to achieve citywide goals and ideals. We want our residents to feel that they have a stake in their community, and how it operates.

Make no mistake, this is not just about putting a number on people's emotions. As one former ruler of Bhutan once said,

"Gross national happiness is more important than gross domestic product." We hope to prove that.

Ultimately, I hope other cities follow our lead. We won't really be able to say if our residents are happier than average until places like Cambridge and Boston perform their own surveys. Until that happens, I will just have to rely on my intuition.

We are the happiest city in the country. Who can tell us otherwise?

Somerville Seniors celebrate in green at WHYC

By William Tauro

The 2013 Annual Somerville Council on Aging's St. Patrick's Day Party was held this past Thursday afternoon at Somerville's Winter Hill Yacht Club.

The members of the yacht club hosted and sponsored the annual event that included everything from home-made Irish dishes of corned beef and cabbage with Irish bread and dessert to good old-fashioned Irish music.

Folk dancing and festive St. Paddy's decor filled the ballroom overlooking the Mystic River.

Over a hundred Somerville seniors were in attendance at the St. Patrick's Day event, most decked out in green, wearing clovers and leprechaun pins.

The Winter Hill Yacht Club has been a good neighbor in the community, hosting many of Somerville's Council on Aging events for the city's seniors for several years.

SOMERVILLE SPORTS

Highlander highlights in the spotlight

By Mike Stoller

Now that the Somerville High winter sports season has wrapped up, it's time to roll the Highlander highlights. Achievements included:

- The boys hockey team winning the Greater Boston League title for the first time in about a quarter of a decade. The Highlanders accomplished the feat by defeating archrival Medford, 4-1, which was tied with Somerville for first place entering the crucial contest.

"It was great for the kids, especially the seniors, who hadn't beat Medford," Somerville head coach Chuck Allen said. "They finally get to do it. I'm proud of the kids and happy for them to be able to celebrate like that."

- The boys basketball team advancing to the Division 1 North Sectional tourney as the No. 11 seed against No. 6 Lynn English. The Highlanders lost in the first round, but finished the campaign with a solid 12-9 record.

"Even in the games we lost, we were playing well," Somerville head coach Mark Antonellis said. "The execution [was] good."

- A tremendous season by the girls basketball team which tied for the Greater Boston League title with Medford and Cambridge Rindge and Latin. The Highlanders made the state tourney as the ninth seed in the Division 1 North Sectional circuit. Somerville lost to No. 8 Andover and finished the campaign with a strong 14-7 ledger.

"I'm looking forward to building on the success of this season," Highlanders' head mentor Paul O'Halloran said. "We had a great group of seniors. Most of them played with each another since third grade. They knew what was expected of them, and they showed in many ways the experience of how things needed to be done."

"Even in the games we lost, we were playing well"

- Senior girls basketball standout Indira Evora connecting for her 1,000th career point in a 66-65 home victory over Winthrop on Jan. 21. Evora was a four-year varsity starter with the Highlanders. She will take her talents to St. Michaels College in the fall.

- Somerville High grad and UMass Lowell junior Antoinette Toussaint earning All-American status by finishing in seventh place in the pentathlon at the Division 2 NCAA Track and Field Championships in Birmingham, Ala.

The feat achieved by Toussaint, who graduated SHS in 2008, is remarkably impressive considering it involves competing in five events in one day. Her score of 3604 put her just two points behind sixth place and enough to be recognized as All-American. Toussaint finished the 60-meter hurdles in a time of 9.07 seconds. She leaped 5 feet, 4 1/4 inches in the high jump and 17 ft. 11 inches in the long jump. She tossed the shot put 26 feet and 1 inch. And she ran the 800 meters in 2 minutes and 17 seconds. Toussaint's time in the 800 meters was the fastest of all the runners in Division 2.

"Antoinette has earned this recognition through hard work and talent," Somerville High head track coach Charlie O'Rourke said. "Despite working a job while attending UMass Lowell, she has successfully competed at the highest level on the NCAA stage."

"The administration, coaches, and track family at Somerville High School could not be prouder of Antoinette and her accomplishments both on the track and off," the coach added. "She is a role model for every athlete at Somerville High School that shows hard work and dedication will pay off."

- Somerville High senior Andre Rolim winning the 600 meters at the MIAA All-State Championships for the third straight year. Rolim finished the race in fifth place, crossing a 1:21.10. Rolim set the state record last winter in the 600 meters with a time of 1:19.94.

Big time Happy Birthday to our old friend Dan Spinosa, who most might not know has Irish roots. He was born on St. Patrick's Day, and he turned the young age of 91 this week. Happy Birthday to our good friend Amanda Marie Eddy, who has been celebrating her birthday for a whole week now here in the Ville! Also coming up this week is one of those famous Hart family members, Rachel Hart-Adams, who is celebrating this week as well. Also, Happy Birthday to the following celebrating also this week: Michelle Saulnier Goss, Michele Lloyd, Kristin Cabral, our own favorite here, Cathleen Twardzik Powers, who has been writing for The News for several years. Also, Happy Birthday to a great guy and lifelong resident, Michael Sullivan, of Spring Hill fame.

To the sub shop owner whose shop is on the main drag that went through a few recent name changes, the new guy on the street between the two well established sub shops. A message from a now, new former customer, "Check the sell by date on your meats." All meats, but in particular the shaved steak bomb wraps. Two orders reportedly bought there that we know of got individuals very sick, including one of our Newstalkers, who got real sick after eating food delivered from your shop this past week. We heard that the owner of the establishment didn't seem to care and didn't want to hear about it, not even offering an "I'm sorry," but reportedly did tell them "tough sh*t" when they complained two days later and expressed concerns, and then told them to "go &@"? yourself." Please clean up your act and for God's sake. Rotate your stock before someone gets worse than sick, and you get a visit from the Board of Health. Hell, maybe the Board of Health should pay you a visit! Even better, maybe someone already called the board of health.

Walnut Street Center Inc., a local non-profit organization providing services to adults with developmental disabilities, is pleased to announce the acceptance of employees, Herbert Ngera, ACCESS, Day Program Manager and Felipe Quiñones Residential Program House Manager, into the 2013 Northeast Leadership Institute. This educational series takes place over the next seven months and is comprised of two full classroom days per month and a field experience. According to the outline description by the program, "The Northeast Leadership Institute is designed to bring together people who are committed to become more effective leaders and to provide them with state of the art information and strategies on leadership that will address their many shared issues. Participants gain skill and knowledge that will assist them to become active leaders in systems change, policy making, and the development of better supports for individuals with disabilities." Herbert and Felipe will have an opportunity to develop their management and leadership skills. They will learn from professionals in the field of leadership and developmental disabilities, along with family members and individuals with disabilities, who will be presenters and facilitators throughout the series. Walnut Street Center, Inc., employees were chosen after completing a detailed application process and competing with other human service professional and organizations. Walnut Street Center is thankful to the Charles E. Harwood Trust and the 2013 Northeast Leadership Institute for this invaluable educational training opportunity.

Under the Roof, a benefit for the Somerville Homeless Coalition, takes place on Saturday, April 27, at 6:00 p.m. Join them as they honor Redbones and its owners Robert Gregory and Caryn Whitney for their community leadership and long-standing support of the Somerville Homeless Coalition. Enjoy Redbones BBQ, dancing to Loomers live music, and a silent auction at the Arts at the Armory 191 Highland Avenue, Somerville.

Also, please remember that next Wednesday night is the date that you saved earlier this month for the fundraiser comedy club event for the Mason's building on Highland Ave. to help preserve a big piece of Somerville History in our city. Masons worldwide donate over $4,000,000 per day to help local charities and children around the world. Now the Highland Masonic Temple Association (HMTA) in Somerville needs your help to assist the King Solomon's Masonic Lodge to help preserve the landmark historic church located at 125 Highland Avenue in Somerville. The association for the members of the lodge is hosting a HMTA 1st Annual "Night Out Comedy Night" at Giggles Comedy Club at Prince Pizzeria located on Rt. 1 in Saugus on Wednesday, March 27 at 7 p.m. For $25 per person you get a standup comic show performed by world-class professional comedians, all the pizza that you can eat, a silent auction, drawings, and a fun time for all. More importantly, you will be helping to preserve the historic lodge building for generations to come. So, come on all you Somervillens out there, please be a part of history and enjoy a fun night out at the same time. For more info and tickets, Facebook message Billy Tauro or call him at (617) 293-2016 or email him at Wmtauro@aol.com and help preserve a piece of Somerville history.

We heard from some local East Somerville residents that are concerned over the proposed 120 residential on the large vacant Cross Street East site. The concern by some, we hear, is that more residential units is not the answer to everything, especially if the rents are going to be $2k plus a month like at Assembly. More residential units and influx of new residents in an already tight part of the city might not be good for anyone. The developers are all over Ward One now, since they re-zoned Broadway from Sullivan Square to School Street. We even hear that a local favorite shop, Patsy's Pastry, has sold out to a developer who wants to build 19 units on that site, 120 on East Cross and who knows how many more. We heard that Winter Hill would be a huge mixed used property proposal on Temple and Broadway, the old Blumsack property. But the worst eyesore of all, the old Winter Hill Star Market, is still standing without anything going in there soon.

Congratulations to Aliana Oppedisano a junior at Somerville High School, who recently won the SPEAK UP-YOUR VOICE MATTERS Poster Project Contest sponsored by the Middlesex District Attorney's Office and the Middlesex Partnerships for Youth, Inc. Aliana will be honored by Middlesex District Attorney, Gerry Leone, at a ceremony at his office this Thursday, March 21.

PLACES TO GO, THINGS TO DO!

SCATV celebrates 30 years of service to Somerville

Somerville Community Access Television was incorporated in March 1983 by Mayor Gene Brune. The Mayor recognized the benefits of having a non-profit organization rather than the cable company provide media services to Somerville citizens. He and his Communications Director Howard Horton worked out the details of this new entity, Somerville Community Access Television, which was the first in Massachusetts and served as a model for access centers around the country. The Mayor's vision was to provide a free-speech platform to Somerville residents, in the hope that it would promote healthy community conversations. Since then, thousands of Somerville residents have come to SCATV to learn video production skills to produce programs for their neighbors.

On March 28 from 6:00 to 9:00pm, SCATV will celebrate its historic beginnings with a party at the station at 90 Union Square. Everyone that participated in projects at SCATV over the last 30 years is invited to come and share their memories, which will be videotaped for posterity. There will be refreshments, music, and reunions with former colleagues. We will also look forward, giving updates on exciting changes in the works for the SCATV studio and website. Former Mayor Gene Brune will be there, along with other people who were instrumental in forming and guiding this well-loved institution.

For more information about the SCATV Anniversary Celebration, call 617-628-8826.

students to win a prize. One student, from each class, who sells the most boxes of cards wins. For every case you sell you receive a bigger prize. I think it's a day off from class, or a free ticket to the Saturday matinee at the nearby Broadway Theater.

I can only imagine how difficult it is going to be, selling these boxes of cards with over 500 catholic students canvassing the neighborhood. Plus, we have many Protestant, Baptist, and some Jewish people in the area who don't celebrate our holiday.

Father Hogan should have thought of that one from a marketing standpoint. If anyone succeeds in selling a Protestant a box of catholic Christmas cards, they definitely deserve a prize in my book.

Today the boxes of cards were handed out. Each student got at least two boxes. The idea was to show the product, take the order, get the cash, and deliver them later.

When I got home this day the only thing I wanted to do was continue building my small fort in the back yard. I scored a couple of old doors from Mr. Fougères' rubbish next door. I couldn't wait to put them in place.

So, I decided to do the card thing over the weekend. Little did I know that my fellow students were already out in force, combing the streets of East Somerville, writing orders from every potential customer. Like a hill of ants they went from house, to house, nearly bumping into one another.

On Saturday morning, I get up and hit the streets. Street, after street, after street, the response was the same, "I just bought some during the week." After three hours of knocking on doors I was not only exhausted, I was depressed. Not a single sale, no interest at all. The market was saturated. I decided to go home. I gave up.

"...if you want to compete in this world you must put work before pleasure"

I climbed Glen Hill to get home as if I was carrying the world. I failed, was all I could think. My grandfathers' words rang in my mind, "the early bird gets the worm".

My mother greeted me with a dish of soup and crackers for lunch. She asked me how many did I sell? I looked down to the floor saying, "None. Not a single box!" I exclaimed. She smiled at me and said, "Well, there is always tomorrow." I appreciated her optimism, but I didn't share it. My mom knew I was down.

When I finished lunch she turned to me saying, "Can you handle an order for four boxes?" I looked at her very puzzled. "From whom?" I asked. "Me, of course!" she responded.

As I was making the slip out she whispered, "Why don't you call your Godmother Sue, aunt Sadie, auntie Mary, your grandfather, uncle Tony, and uncle Sammy. I'm sure they all will take a box, or two. They don't live here in this section of Somerville."

In less than thirty minutes, I sold over 24 boxes of cards and never left the kitchen. I was thrilled. Later that afternoon my mother sat next to me in the kitchen and asked, "Now did you learn anything today?" I said, "Yes, I learnt it's not what you do, it's who you know!"

She was not smiling at my response. She replied, "Well, it may appear that way, but not true. You need to understand, if you want to compete in this world you must put work before pleasure. When you recognized you made a mistake by playing instead of selling, you pouted. You should have been thinking, what can I do next? The other kids didn't beat you, you beat you, by giving up. Paul, life is not easy. You need to understand that now, rather than later. God has given you many magnificent gifts. Good health, intelligence, and a cute smile. Use those gifts."

On Sunday morning I went to the 9:00 a.m. mass. Father Higgins does that mass. I like it because the sermon is quick. Thank God!

When I got home my mother said, "Soooo, what are you doing this morning?" My reply was that I wanted to watch Community Opticians Talent Show. Her response was firm but clear, "Go down to visit Mr. Pearlman. He's home today. Bring him a sample box and let him buy a few." I thought my mother was nuts. I said, "Mr. Pearlman is Jewish. What's he going to do with Christmas cards?" She said, "Listen, you learnt nothing yesterday."

She continued, "Mr. Pearlman is the manager of a small clothing factory in Boston. They have many people working for them. Most are not Jewish, but catholic. They always do something nice for their employees during the holidays. Convince him it would be a nice gift for the workers."

Well, Mr. Pearlman bought four cases of cards, 48 boxes in all, at a dollar each. He paid for them in advance by giving me fifty dollars. He told me to keep the rest as a tip, as he patted me on the back. I put the money in my pocket and walked all the way home with my hand on the cash so it wouldn't fall out.

A few months later I got another great idea. I contacted the greeting card company to see what else I could sell. They told me the company had another collection called "All Occasion Cards." You know, birthday, get well, sympathy, graduation, all generic types, no religious stuff.

The rest is history. I sold boxes, and boxes, and boxes all spring. They practically sold themselves. I owned the whole neighborhood, no competition. And talk about money. I was paying 60 cents a box, selling them for a dollar each. My mother said I made nearly two hundred dollars profit that spring. She gave an allowance of two dollars a week for a while. I told her to keep half for herself. Her eyes started to tear up and said, "I'm proud of you Paul. You learnt more than I thought."

It was another good day growing up in Somerville, Massachusetts. This story is true as authored by Paul Maisano.

I also heard that Robert Urich drove his famous green Mustang through some Somerville streets while filming an episode of Spenser for Hire. And I love this next sighting. Mr. T was signing autographs at the opening of the Brooks Pharmacy on Somerville Ave. Someone said they saw The French Chef Julia Child shopping at McKinnon's in Davis Square (she lived in Cambridge). Farrah Fawcett Majors was supposedly at Memory Lane. Rex Trailer rode a horse in Somerville's Memorial Day parade one year. Queen Latifah was in Casey's.

Cam Neely and Lyndon Byers were seen in the Ville a lot back in the day (I used to see L.B. in Redbones). Cowboy and music legend Roy Rogers appeared at Somerville High years ago. Former Celtics star Hank Finkel was in Mama Gina's around 1975. The ill-fated 1985 Super Bowl bound New England Patriots were allegedly bar hopping in Somerville before the big game.

I met Arlo Guthrie and James Taylor after a concert at Tufts. I got Arlo's autograph on a dollar bill, then framed it.

Somerville is lucky to have produced talented entertainers such as Bobby "Boris" Pickett and my good friend actor and comedian Tony V. Ben Affleck, Jimmy Tingle and Lenny Clarke are also talents that frequent the Ville.

So you see, Somerville is a popular place for famous people to hang around. It all started long ago with Paul Revere and George Washington, and it just keeps getting better.

OFF THE SHELF

‘The Government of Nature’ by Afaa Michael Weaver

Somerville poet Afaa Michael Weaver has a new collection of poetry out The Government of Nature. I asked poet Dennis Daly author of The Custom House (Ibbetson Street Press) to review this book.

One Spring I find myself with a woman, craving love’s raw way, getting high on sex,
thrill of skin and breasts, losing myself,
my medication for my heart failing to slow
my addiction until this door opens, above what I call love. I see myself, a child, feel the hands of the man carving the cross I carry, its totem marks.

A little over halfway through the book the fiercely protective poem Remember crouches like a lion. Weaver dedicates this poem to his granddaughter. It begins as a charming childhood litany. Listen,

If I forget to plug the sun,
let me know
If I forget to tame the sharks’ teeth,
let me know
If I forget to stop the tsunamis
let me know
If I forget to tie up the bears,
Let me know...

The poem continues with the same rhythm but ends quite differently and quite grimly. Here’s the last three sections:

If I forget to outlaw nightmares,
let me know
If I forget to put perverts away,
let me know
If I forget that the divine thing moved inside me to write this,
the thing that can do all things,
let me know
let me down easy
into the earth.

In his title poem, The Government of Nature, the poet addresses his body directly. He again goes to a place of memories in order to find himself and negate those same memories and confront the monster, who propagated them. He says,

I come with you to places I cannot go alone, as alone
I would be only the decision to be, not the things
I cannot explain to anyone, except in the privacy
Of a piety I have had to own, a profound saintliness
That came to me in places too foul to remain buried...

My favorite poem in this book and one that gives this collection a gentle and positive gravity Weaver entitles Scapple. It portrays good people trying to do the right thing and make the best of life’s mix of good and bad. Here, for instance, is Weaver’s loving description of his father,

...in the good times, between the strikes and layoffs at the mills when work was too slack, and Pop sat around pretending not to worry, not to let the stream of sweat he wiped from his head be anything except the natural way of things, keeping his habits, the paper in his chair by the window, the radio with the Orioles, with Earl Weaver the screamer and Frank Robinson the gentle black man, keeping his habits...

Weaver’s book transforms the unnatural nightmares of a damaged childhood into something transcendent, warm and wondrous. This is beyond poetry. This is alchemy.

– Review by Dennis Daly

These poems of Afaa Michael Weaver take you by the hand, like a trusted grown-up takes a child, down a landscaped and stylized pathway of disturbing memories, family ghosts, and familiar, even endearing, internal landmarks. The cadences are well wrought, formal (in the sense of elevated language), and beautifully rhythmic. In some poems the rhythm delivers a near chant. In others it becomes a strangled but pulsed whisper.

Weaver covers some dangerous territory here. The power of this poetic collection derives from his meditations on his own experiences as a survivor of childhood sexual abuse by an uncle. So much could have gone wrong in the writing. But it doesn’t. Without hatred or self-pity Weaver strikes just the right tone with intelligent contemplation and a pretty remarkable understanding of evil’s context.

The poems themselves seem to bridge a psychic divide between the horror of past predation and the solace of a future life. In the poem The Path Weaver describes his trek into an alternative peace this way,

With my umbrella I stumble, too lonesome for the way water soaks into the skin in the thunder, listening for the sound of the eagles circling above the lost children of wild pigs or what can be caught and carried in the talon. My hands are not free, too busy with trying to keep cover on my head. The stones have another meditation, a kind of counting to music. Touch me, they say, and a thousand stone paths will make their way to me.
Once in the night when it is dry, when the pretty rain of mountain springtime was suspended,
I walked this path to the dream of where we live.

Again using rain and water as unifying factors Weaver in his piece entitled The Ten Thousand constructs a gauzy memory palace in which reality must be faced and imagination deciphered. The poet says,

If I write without color it is to obey the gray way rain brings the past to us. The ten thousand are one giant palace with a room for remembering, where you must stand alone, touch and believe while it seems you are touching nothing and have gone mad in this life, this gift. We are sitting on a rock in the thick falling of water, purple lilies are growing in the sun’s ocean shadow, sheep with golden wool are flying in the trees, a patient monkey is bandaging a wounded blade of grass, the garden is a mesa, seeds are mountain caves, the moon has gone infinite, made two of its own selves for each of our palms. Now we have faces.

This poem flows wonderfully. Between surreal images Eastern thought connects with Christian mythology. Doubting Thomas is even here touching the wounds of his Redeemer.

Some of these poems are quite explicit and troubling. The poet, however, has a point to make about the damage that can be done to a child and the burden that that child carries throughout his life. This image from Weaver’s poem Looking Up from the Naked Bed I found particularly affecting,

Poet Jake Montgomery writes the LYRICAL about his poem Fools Gold...

“My standard is not the gold standard; but what is the new gold standard? Today gold is more valuable than ever, and who is it that made that decision? Where is the golden lining? Who is defining our market?”

Fools Gold: A Golden Opportunity

There lies,
Gold,
A golden opportunity,
For anyone who can see,
The fallacy in reality.

Its value is vast,
For a mere metal,
Found in the ground,
Then peddled by people,
Who look only at golden,
Flower petals.

The stock is rising,
Value mind you,
Is in the mind,
The ticker is real,
However reality,
Is poorly defined.

Attention all Lemmings
GOLD RUSH!
Rush to buy gold,
Before it has all been sold.

WAIT!
You are in luck,
Everyone can make a buck
Off a bucket of gold,
Do not fold your hand,
Play it and pay the toll,
In gold.

There’s still space for more gold fools,
Fools gold sold by old ghouls,
On the market we hold dear,
The reserve is in the riverbed,
Making love in black and red.
